

John D thumbs through wires of support

Convention Ordered

TORIES PHASE-OUT CHIEF

By BON COLLISTER, Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Conservative meeting Wednesday dumped John Diefenbaker and gave him another one-year term to hide the fatal wound.

Today, the Tory leader still refuses to be dumped, but the course is set to early retirement.

With the likelihood of a leadership convention before the end of next year, his traditional caucus support is sure to break up as some of its key members start their own campaigns for the top job.

Already, his ordeal at the hands of the meeting has affected his ability to function in the Commons, where his stature has been undermined by the actions of the delegates.

Wednesday, for the first time in 26 years, he called at his Parliament Hill office but couldn't face parliament.

The Conservative leader will consider his future over the weekend. He is unlikely to retire immediately, but will indicate his plans soon.

If he agrees to the wishes of the delegates and stays as leader until a leadership convention probably next fall, he will be in a powerful position to influence the choice of a successor.

Worst Beatings Over

This fact alone guarantees that his worst beatings are over, that he will be able to rebuild his image as leader and step down next year with what Dalton Camp has promised him: "A blaze of glory."

Wednesday night, Mr. Camp said he hoped to talk to Mr. Diefenbaker — "but don't ask me when."

He did not intend to do anything more about a leadership convention "at the present time."

But the meeting had been definite in its instructions for a leadership convention and he would discuss it with the executive and other people.

John Diefenbaker was on a losing streak from the moment the leadership showdown began.

First, the delegates voted overwhelmingly for a secret ballot on all leadership votes.

Then came three leadership votes: ● Two virtually identical motions calling for leadership convention plus an expression of support for Mr. Diefenbaker were approved by 548 to 208, and 563 to 186.

● The count on a third vote, on confidence in Mr. Diefenbaker, was not revealed. E. A. Goodman, Q.C., of Toronto, chairman of the resolutions committee, said he had burned the ballot papers before they were counted.

While Mr. Diefenbaker was given a vote of support, it was a hollow success.

The word "confidence," traditional in resolutions of support for the leader, was missing, and the word "support" was used.

It will never be known how

Hot Wires Warm Weary Warrior

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "The party caucus, not the party organization determines the party leadership in Parliament."

This was John Diefenbaker answering the question as it was put to him: "Do you intend remaining as leader of the official opposition no matter what?"

Then he went on to recall how Sir Winston Churchill had served nearly three years as prime minister before the Conservative party was re-elected.

The party caucus is supreme, he insisted, "and that is that."

He was saying these things in an interview with initially three and then five newspapermen four hours after he had marshalled into the lobby of the Chateau Laurier and told 300 wildly cheering supporters: "Fight on, my men."

But where at the Chateau, he had quoted the Elizabethan warrior knight, Sir John Barton, he was now reading from the Bible.

And instead of the lines from the Middle Ages, "I am wounded but I am not slain — I lay me down to rest awhile and then I'll fight again," it was the 27th Psalm.

A telegram had come in, one of several hundred, this particular wire from Toronto, with the message: "See Psalm 27."

So he reached into the book-shelf near his Centre Block office desk, and read:

"The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?" "The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

Then, with a sigh, after a brief pause he continued: "When the wicked, even mine

Final Term for Fleming

B.C. Boss Fed Up

By JACK FRY
Legislative Reporter

B.C. Progressive Conservative president Stuart Fleming said Wednesday he will not stand for re-election because of his inability to reconcile differences of opinion within the party in B.C.

In addition to giving up the presidency, he said that "under no circumstances" will he consider contesting the provincial leadership.

He said in an interview from his office in Vernon that he notified other Tory officers "some while ago" of his intention not to run for another term.

REPORT DENIED

Mr. Fleming denied earlier reports that he is quitting because Esquimalt-Saanich MP George Chatterton charged that 60 B.C. delegates to the Tory convention in Ottawa were illegally appointed.

"Part of my reason is this—I

have been unable to reconcile the differences of opinion and the conflict within the party so far as British Columbia is concerned," Mr. Fleming said.

"I've failed."

"I had hoped that I might find a middle ground but I haven't. I have completely failed in that."

Mr. Fleming said it would be more desirable to elect a president in the Greater Vancouver area, "where he is more readily available to the headquarters and the day-to-day operations of the party."

He said he hopes a new president can be elected sometime in February or March.

"We cannot go on indefinitely leaving the provincial leadership politically vacant. Now I don't know of anyone specifically who is prepared to make this commitment, but I understand one or more are seriously considering it."

'Hitler Youth' Feels Maritime Muscle

OTTAWA (Special) — How high did feelings run, how hot blood had?

Among the Maritimeers, with violence. "There goes the old S.O.B.," said a student Conservative who later identified himself as a Camp follower, or as the Diefenbaker loyalists call them "Hitler Youth."

The "old S.O.B." was Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker as he left the Chateau and his inner guard of 300 cheering and still wildly loyal followers after crying: "Fight on, my men."

And the student who had called him that was flat on the floor the next moment.

Nursing a skinned knuckle where it had connected with the student's chin was Robert Mair, Conservative MP for Cape Breton North and Victoria.

"Sure I slugged the young punk," he said. "He can't call The Chief that."

Another whose muscle impressed another of Dalton Camp's "Hitler Youth" was Donald MacInnis, Conservative MP for Cape Breton South. He had gone to the voting desk to get his ballot and he was wearing an Arthur Maloney button.

"Who're you?" asked the student. "Show me your credentials."

"I'll show you," shouted MacInnis, the fighting ex-convict miner from Cape Breton. "Here, look," and he waved a fistful of scarred knuckles under the student's startled nose.

He got the ballot without further argument.

Sheppard Freed

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—Samuel H. Sheppard was found innocent Wednesday night of killing his pregnant wife, Marilyn, in her bedroom 12 years ago.

The jury of seven men and five women took nearly 12 hours to acquit the 42-year-old former 61st son of a second-degree murder in the retrial he won last June from the U.S. Supreme Court.

Sheppard served nine years in prison after another jury — in a courtroom just four steps across the hall from where the retrial was held — convicted him of second-degree murder Dec. 21, 1954.

The defendant did not take the stand in his retrial where 31 witnesses testified, compared with 70 at the nine-week first trial when the jury deliberated five days. At the first trial the charge was first degree murder, and the state asked the death penalty.

The retrial jury got the case from Common Pleas Judge Francis J. Talty at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday and returned its verdict at 10:15 p.m.

Reporters gathered around Sheppard and asked him to make a statement. He pointed to defence counsel P. Lee Bailey and said: "That's my man."

"Tell them anything you want, Sam," said Bailey. Marilyn Sheppard died with more than 25 bone-deep blows to the head on a Sunday morning in the upstairs bedroom of her suburban Bay Village home.

The state said Sheppard killed Marilyn during a quarrel over his attentions to Susan Hayes, then a young, attractive medical technician at Bay View hospital.

Sheppard, who since has lost his medical licence, served there as a neurosurgeon. Sheppard has contended that the crime was committed by an intruder, who knocked him unconscious after beating Marilyn to death.

Commissioners Picked

All-Angles Probe To Comb Security

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson Wednesday tabled an order-in-council establishing a three-man royal commission to look into all aspects of security methods and procedures in Canada.

The commission, to be headed by Victoria-born Maxwell Weir Mackenzie, former deputy minister of trade and commerce, was promised by Prime Minister Pearson in March during discussion of the George Victor Spencer security case.

He said then that the aim would be to find out how well

most effective and how they can best be implemented.

Hearings of the body will be secret.

The order-in-council said the commissioners, in making their study and report, must take all necessary steps to preserve:

● The secrecy of sources of security information in Canada.

● The privacy of individuals involved in specific cases which may be examined.

● The security of information provided to Canada in confidence by other nations.

Mr. Mackenzie, 58, is chairman of the board of Canadian Chemical Company in Montreal. He served as deputy minister of trade and commerce from 1945 to 1951 and was first deputy minister of the department of defence production for a year before returning to private industry.

WIDE INTERESTS

Mr. Mackenzie also is president of Chemcell Ltd., a subsidiary, and a director of a number of Canadian companies. He began his public service in 1939 with the foreign exchange control board and later served with the wartime prices and trade board.

Money Talk Drags On

OTTAWA (CP)—The money supply debate stretched through a 12th straight day in the Commons Wednesday as Liberals and Conservatives clashed over the ramifications of the government's success in finding money when the opposition thought it had none.

The bill to give the government authority to spend $372,000,000 to meet November bills got through second reading and most of clause-by-clause study before it stalled. It had been expected to pass easily after 11 days of opposition attacks on the government tabled off Tuesday.

OPINION SOUGHT

The jam arose after Conservative requested the public accounts committee to call in Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson for an opinion on the way the government turned up enough money to meet civil service and armed forces payrolls although the money supply bill had not been passed.

Revenue Minister Benson said he would give consideration to doing this, but couldn't commit himself further than that.

Storm Rakes Britain

Oil Rig Sends SOS

LONDON (CP) — An urgent call for help flashed ashore

Wednesday night from the North Sea oil rig Neptune One, 3 1/2 miles off Ravenscar, Yorkshire, as gales with some winds gusting to 110 miles an hour continued lashing Britain and nearby waters.

Its first signal to the Scarborough coast guard station said: "We are taking a terrific pounding."

Then, urgently: "Request lifeboat assistance. May have to evacuate."

The Scarborough lifeboat immediately put to sea.

The rig has a crew of about 30.

The oil rig has fixed legs dug deep in the sea bed below 110 feet of water. It was owned jointly by the Shell and Esso petroleum companies, but was taken over by T&E Ltd., a French firm, about three months ago.

Elsewhere, strong gales over southern England caused widespread damage to buildings, up-set land, sea and air traffic for the second consecutive day and brought danger of flooding.

Residents in large areas on the Thames River estuary were warned to watch for rises up to three feet above normal.

Some ferry services across the English Channel and sailings between Liverpool and Ireland were cancelled.

Dozens of other ships were forced to run for shelter as the winds mounted in fury.

The Orkney Islands were cut off both by sea and air.

In The Netherlands, the gales forced suspension of all pilot services and alerted dike guards along the country's southern coast.

Wires Warming

enemies and my toes came upon me to eat up my flesh, they stumbled and fell.

"Though a host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear."

It is a lengthy Psalm, occupying nearly two columns of his Bible, and he read most of it.

Then, smiling, he put the Bible away and turned to smile those "enemies."

ONLY TWO

He identified only two by name.

They were "Col. Harkness," his former defence minister and still MP for Calgary North, and "Mrs. Jean Wadda," MP for eastern Ontario's Grenville-Dundas and daughter of Hon. Earl Rowe, the former Conservative MP he had appointed lieutenant-governor of Ontario.

They had "packed" the convention floor Monday night when he had been booed and hissed by some of those whom, in wondering disbelief, he had asked: "Are you Conservatives?"

LITTLE ROOM

"They put their 'directed' people in there first," he related, "and so there was little room left for others."

The weapons he used in counterattacking his "enemies" were some of the telegrams which, during the day of disillusion, had cascaded a foot deep onto his office desk.

He shuffled through them, looking impatiently for the one from Calgary which read: "We can smell the skunks all the way from here."

SMOKING HOT

But this was mild compared to some others that seemed almost to smoke in their blazing indignation over what some of them termed his "unforgivable harassment."

Some of them used such rough language, as he described it, that he paraphrased some of the words with "blankety blank" blank.

This convention's conduct read one of them, had been "utterly disgraceful."

PUNK EXPERTS

Another referred to Dalton Camp's "young punks."

Out in Calgary, he quipped, where one wire had reported smelling the "skunks all the way from here," they were "experts" in the art of detecting foul odors.

There was another telegram, describing some of Dalton Camp's young Conservatives and the university Tories as "Hitler Youth."

Dief nodded, smiling over that one.

"Yes," he said bitingly, "and commanded by their own colonel."

Was he referring, he was asked, to Col. Douglas Harkness?

"You're the military expert," he told the newspaperman asking the question, "you ought to know."

FILES AND FILES

There seemed no end to the file of telegrams, as he kept shuffling through them.

"Ah ha," he cried, "listen to this one," and read from it: "I have been a Tory all my life, but not any more, not after this infamous plot by the party power elite against the leader."

There were references to the "Yeg CBO" to the "fakers of the press," to the "ascendancy."

ENOUGH OF IT

Finally, John Diefenbaker had had enough of them.

And incredibly, as if nothing at all had happened and this was a day like any other day, he broke off, and leaning back in what he calls his "captain's chair," he began spinning stories of earlier times out west.

There was one more telegram. "God give you strength to pilot the Conservative ship through these troubled waters," it read.

And John Diefenbaker, nodding over it, said, "I know his will."

Mr. Diefenbaker would have fared on a simple vote of confidence.

But the vote was more than two-for-one for this motion: "That this party expresses its support for the Right Honorable John G. Diefenbaker, its national leader, and acknowledges its wholehearted appreciation of his universally recognized services to the party."

SUITABLE TIME

And, in view of the current situation in the party, directs the national executive, after consultation with the national leader, to call a leadership convention at a suitable time before January 1, 1968.

This allows the Opposition leader to hold his office during Canada's centennial party.

About 300 fewer votes were cast than in Mr. Camp's contest with Toronto lawyer Arthur Maloney for the presidency.

MEETING BOYCOTTED

The reasons for that in fact was that many Diefenbaker supporters followed their leader and boycotted the meeting.

The outcome was inevitable, and many of his supporters did not stay around for the result.

Mr. Diefenbaker had given them the lead earlier in the day in refusing to attend the closing dinner. He was to have been guest speaker.

BARRAGE OF BOOS

After the barrage of boos and insults during his opening speech, he refused to take any more.

"I won't submit myself to any more of that," he told a friend.

The meeting, bogged down by more than six hours of vote-counting, scarcely came to grips with Mr. Camp's key demand, constitutional reform to allow periodic reviews of leadership.

REPORT BACK

A committee would be set up with instructions to review and revise the constitution and report back to the association.

Later, Mr. Camp said "the whole document has to be overhauled."

It may have been wise, he added, not to settle the question at the meeting because there were some disagreements, not on principle but on practices.

SUDDEN SEIZURE

"We weren't taken by a sudden seizure of democracy," he said, "and perhaps the longer we consider the matter, the better the amendments to the constitution will be."

The spotlight now turns away, for a while at least, from Mr. Camp to the parliamentary caucus, Mr. Diefenbaker's best arena.

Despite the lack of signs that Mr. Diefenbaker will co-operate, Mr. Camp is hopeful: "There is always common meeting ground among democrats," he said.

GOOD FOR PARTY

The meeting, he said, had been healthy and good for the party and the country.

"It has shown to the country the capacity of the party to reform itself, to express itself democratically."

Mr. Camp denied again that he is a leadership candidate. All he had done was to try to give leadership to the expressed desires of the party.

WHAT WAY?

He said he would be surprised if Mr. Diefenbaker resigned: "How, when, in what way?" he asked.

Asked if he had tried already to see Mr. Diefenbaker, he replied: "I would rather not discuss that."

Some of Mr. Diefenbaker's comments during the day were felt to Mr. Camp for his reaction.

Mr. Diefenbaker, he was told, had said that the parliamentary caucus was the governing body and he would adjust his actions to the caucus rather than the convention.

IMPORTANT PART

"The caucus," Mr. Camp replied, "is an important part of the party... but the association is the sovereign instrument of this party."

Asked if the meeting had vindicated his campaign for leadership overhaul, he replied: "I'm not interested in personal vindication or anything like that."

"We now feel satisfied about the one thing we wanted to achieve, an opportunity for the party to express itself."

NOT ORGANIZED

Mr. Camp denied that his campaign had been "organized."

"To my own certain knowledge," he said, "anyone who says this was organized is misunderstanding."

In the vicious atmosphere at the meeting, rumors have been swirling around about improper voting in the Camp-Maloney contest.

Last night, Lincoln Alexander, in charge of the vote, boomed out a denial.

RIGGING DENIED

"I have heard some allegations that there were irregularities in counting that vote."

"I know the responsibility the job calls for. There were no irregularities whatsoever. My committee is prepared to stand behind me in that."

"There have been allegations that we know the amount of balloting cast in each province. This, too, is a lie."

With his final speech, Mr.

Mr. Diefenbaker, who says fighting will rob the party of its role as one of the two great parties.

Last night, a poll showed that the Tories and New Democrats are now neck-and-neck in public esteem.

But what shocks Tories in both factions of the party is the prospect that division and in-lie esteem.

But there isn't much peace among the Tories who live around Parliament Hill now that the visiting delegates have left town.

Regular Review Stalled

OTTAWA (CP)—A move for a periodic leadership review died Wednesday on the floor of the Conservative party meeting.

The proposal, introduced by the party's constitution committee, called for a leadership convention within 18 months after each general election, or whenever a vacancy occurs.

A long procedural wrangle developed on this issue in the dying minutes of the three-day meeting. Delegates finally settled for establishment of a standing committee to review the party constitution fully and to report to the Conservative association.

HELD OFF

After defeating a move to table the proposal for a periodic review, the delegates still were faced with other amendments, but decided to hold off until the results of a secret ballot calling for a leadership convention next year were announced.

The idea of a high convention idea won overwhelming support in this ballot. Once that was announced, the delegates had no heart to pursue the review proposal and readily accepted a motion to leave it to a committee.

Victoria Followers Block For Chief's Grand Tour

By WILLIAM THOMAS
Colonist Reporter

OTTAWA — It's still not yet time to pull down the blinds for John Diefenbaker.

He made an unscheduled foray through the lobbies of the Chateau Laurier Wednesday with more blocking to keep back the crowds than a star quarterback usually gets.

Mr. Diefenbaker's grand tour was managed by the highest-paid announcer in Canadian radio, Joel Aldred, and it was a small triumph.

CHEER-LEADERS

Greater Victoria was right in there for Mr. Diefenbaker. George Chatterton, MP for Piquich-Saanich, led the cheering section while Russ Simpson, a delegate from the same riding, and Eric Charman, a member of the Victoria delegation, helped clear a way for the party leader.

Just before Mr. Diefenbaker arrived at the convention hotel Mr. Chatterton left a tightly-jammed group of MPs to offer these comments:

DON'T THINK SO

"There are rumors going around Mr. Diefenbaker is ready to step down but I don't think he will."

"I have never known Diefenbaker give up a fight when he thinks he is right and he is in a fighting mood."

"He said he would not speak at the closing banquet after his treatment by that rigged meeting Monday, so they have cancelled it."

DESERVES IT

As the clanging mass of people followed John around the lobbies, Mr. Aldred commented, "This tremendous welcome is exactly what should be expected under all the circumstances on his record and as a man. He deserves this welcome and he is getting it right now."

The emotion of this triumphant moment clearly moved John Diefenbaker. He stopped time and again to shake hands and offer words of affection to his supporters, to the dismay of a sprinkling of Camp followers on the fringe of the mob.

FIGHTS BACK

Mr. Diefenbaker looked tired and shaken Monday night after the banquet. Wednesday he was vibrant and in a mood to fight. As always happens a supporter found him a platform and John D. was ready to put his best ad-lib style of speaking to work.

He told a jammed hall, "I deeply appreciate this for I gave no advance notice. I just told a couple of friends I wanted to come over and thank you for the support you have given to me."

TRAINED SEALS

"I read in the press the old magic is gone but how could anyone practise that with would be trained seals that stood in front of me the other night?"

He turned to thank Arthur Maloney saying, "We did not bring about the disparity in this party."

Mr. Diefenbaker went back to his theme of the common man — "As long as you people in the constituencies are faithful, this party will not die. Despite the predictions, this party has something for Canada."

He told them, "Go back to your constituencies and build."

but he was drowned out by yells of "Not without you John, not without you."

As the crowd surged toward the elevators with him I asked if he was still coming to Victoria to fish at the end of the month.

He said, "I don't know, for sure yet. I am not sure of my plans yet but I want to go out there and I have arranged to go out there."

Still, despite Mr. Diefenbaker's tactical appearance just before the confidence vote, B.C. delegates were divided in their views.

Most were ready to express thanks and confidence for their leader but most wanted a leadership convention.

Peter Runkle of Dawson Creek, representing Cariboo, said, "We want an opportunity to reassess leadership and still have the chance to express our opinion."

John Gracey, Okanagan-Revelstoke delegate and a member of the party national executive, added, "I think the way the motions have been worded here do express the honest and true sentiments of our people at this meeting."

"This has been a successful convention in view of the fact there was business that had to be done before we could get into the matter of Conservative policy."

DIETARY WORK

Victoria's Charman said, "I think many of the citizens at home in Victoria, as reflected in the last two elections, knew there was some dirty work going on in this party. No matter what happens there just has to be a leadership convention."

"A convention should be held off for at least a year for, if the same gang that has control of this party now has a convention in March, we will be in trouble for years to come."

TORY FORCE

He added, "The thing that impresses me in this convention is the emergence of Arthur Maloney as a force in this Conservative party."

It still was not clear what Mr. Diefenbaker will do — but he surprised many Camp followers with his support and his vigorous counter-attacks.

He might resign from the House of Commons to prevent the Conservative Association from splitting into two factions with the vast majority of caucus sitting as a rump group loyal to Mr. Diefenbaker and opposed to the party of Dalton Camp.

"I do know that several senior members of Parliament have discussed resigning from the party. Mr. Diefenbaker will do everything in his power to prevent this open breach."

'About Time Woman on Executive'

OTTAWA (CP)—Flora MacDonald, newly-elected Progressive Conservative party secretary, said Wednesday she ran for the office "because I thought it was about time a woman was elected to the national executive."

Ms. MacDonald, a tall, slim redhead, was dismissed as a national PC organizer last spring. It was rumored she was let go for her anti-Diefenbaker feelings.

The official reason for her firing from the post she had held since 1966 was that the new national director, James Johnston, wanted to start fresh with a new staff.

The China Debate

THE INDICATIONS have been strong that when the debate on the seating of Communist China in the United Nations begins once more in the General Assembly, Canada will advance some definite plan in this respect. There have been reports from abroad that this country will propose that both China, Communist and Nationalist, should have UN representation, the former a seat in the Security Council and the latter in the General Assembly.

Whether this is so remains a mystery to the Canadian people and Parliament, although the disclosure is almost at hand. No doubt it is to preserve the confidentiality of international negotiations and manoeuvrings that Prime Minister Pearson and External Affairs Minister Martin have fended off enquiries with roundabout replies. It might for instance have tended to show the nation's hand if when Opposition Leader Diefenbaker asked if Canada was negotiating with eight other nations to get Red China into the UN, Mr. Pearson had answered more positively than by saying it "was not a fact in those terms."

But the prime minister has confirmed that Canada is working for "universality of membership" in the UN, and also that the government's attitude is summed up in the statement of Mr. Martin on Sept. 23 that "there is a growing opinion in Canada that, if this (UN) organization is to realize its potential capacities, all nations and especially those which, like continental China, represent a significant portion of the world's population, must be represented here."

If this means what it appears to mean, and if in the forthcoming General Assembly debate the Canadian delegation takes a stand firmly and unequivocally for finding a way to bring the most populous country on earth into the world organization, Canada will undoubtedly gain respect abroad and at home among its citizens.

Mr. Heward Graffey, a Conservative MP who spent two weeks recently as a parliamentary observer at the United Nations, reported that he found many UN delegations puzzled as to Canada's real attitude towards China. And so are many Canadians. It was only a short time ago, for instance, that Canada voted in support of a U.S. motion to keep the Nationalist Chinese in and the Communist Chinese out of the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, an action seemingly at variance with the "universality of membership" theme.

Canada cannot exercise its most beneficial influence in international councils if suspected of being two-faced or under the domination of the United States at every turn. Hopefully, the 16th annual China debate will set the record straight.

Hear, Hear!

LABOR MINISTER John R. Nicholson was speaking of labor-management relations when he told a meeting in Edmonton that while much had been accomplished in the technical excellence of communications, "at times we have great difficulty in understanding the person who sits beside us." His message, however, was applicable on an unrestricted scale, throughout public and private life—and not least in political realms, from village commission to Parliament.

Somehow, Mr. Nicholson said, there must be developed within the individual not only the ability to listen to the other person but the ability to understand that other person, although not necessarily to agree with him: "True communication only comes when each person understands the position of the other."

Perhaps he should have placed more emphasis of the need of the ability to listen, for this is the absolute prerequisite to understanding. And it is the lack of it that probably causes more frustrating debate, more wasted words, than any other deficiency.

The unfortunate circumstance is that too many participants in discussions are much more concerned with what they themselves are going to say next than with what the other fellow is saying now. The council member or the legislator or the convention delegate is somewhat rare who has the gift—or the purposeful acquisition—of being able to give full attention to the utterances of others; to think without turning down his ears. He is a valuable man in any assembly.

It is immediately obvious how well candidates for public office speak, as soon as they take to the microphone or the platform. It is a pity the public has no quick and easy way to measure how well they listen.

Pointless Snub

IN LONDON on Remembrance Day Mr. Sidney Brice, head of the Rhodesian mission there, walked alone to the Cenotaph in Whitehall to lay a wreath for "the government and people" of his rebellious state. Later, the Salvation Army band played while the Anglo-Rhodesian Society held its own service there, carefully avoiding any conflict with the ceremonies scheduled earlier and attended by the Queen, to which pointedly they were not invited.

The Anglo-Rhodesian Society and officers of the mission had hoped to have at their lonely ceremony the band of the Scots Guards.

Even that courtesy was denied them. Rhodesians, white and black, served Britain and her Commonwealth allies well in two world wars. The present dispute between London and Salisbury has nothing whatever to do with the men and women the Remembrance Day ceremonies honored. Rhodesians should have been welcomed as old comrades.

The attitude of the British government in this instance shows a distressing lack of tact and generosity extraordinary of character. It will certainly offend many more people than it pleases both in Britain and abroad.

Policy Clues

MR. Nesbitt: . . . As I say, it is very hard to find out what our foreign policy is on anything. But we do know that the minister of national defence and the secretary of state for external affairs have told us that our foreign policy is related to our defence policy. That being the case, the only thing we can do here is to try to find out what our defence policy is and then maybe we will know what our foreign policy is.

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax ...

By TOM TAYLOR

A READER whose eyes are keen, unlike mine own which must have been myopic when I read the proofs, telephoned me to say that the song Now is the Hour wasn't "Gracie Moore's but belonged to Gracie Fields.

Of a surety it does, but there is no explanation for such lapses.

Gracie Moore had her own hour and a voice of memorable quality, but it was the Lancashire Lass whom I meant to credit with the song typical of wartime and of her own scintillating self.

How could I forget her in any case, recalling her visit in 1940 when she held 5,000 troops enthralled as they sat on the ground at Work Point Barracks listening to so gifted an entertainer.

My apologies to the lady who now resides on the Isle of Capri.

The top man of our military hierarchy, General Adair, has told an audience in Montreal that under the uniform program elements of the army, forces will still function on land, on the sea and in the air.

This, surely, was as redundant as anything could be. Was it ever imagined that they wouldn't; that no matter the single name to be coined for them there wouldn't be separate operational roles for each of these elements?

It is all the more anomalous therefore, that although stating as he did that the combined force would be to be coined for individuals without identity or lacking the traditions of their environment, the intention is to abolish the designations of army, navy and air force.

There is more than a touch of Alice in Wonderland to this whole business.

Another reader called me to suggest that Helen of Troy, as mentioned here last yesterday, didn't elope with Paris but instead was abducted by that action of the House of Priam.

Maybe so. I wasn't at the Siege of Troy and must depend on the authorities on this subject, who weren't there either as it happens, as to whether the lady was willing or not.

Those I did consult didn't agree, but I chose to favor Paris, perhaps because he paid for his romance by being fatally wounded by a poisoned arrow during the siege.

As to all this, nobody seems to know for sure whether there was such a poet as Homer, or whether the epics bearing his name were in fact the work of a group of authors. But if he is mythical like the gods he cites in proudful he nevertheless made a lasting imprint on the literary scene.

Disappointment came strongly upon us when the airline strike banished from our local vision the sight of the Royal Highland Fusiliers in the panoply of pomp and ceremony scheduled for Tuesday night at the Memorial Arena.

I could have wept, slightly at least, since as a former Hill man I had anticipated sampling their new look consequent on amalgamation with the Royal Scots Fusiliers.

A Vancouver music critic — lucky these musicians — reported of their show that the pageantry of the spectacle so absorbed him he quite forgot to listen to the music.

How could he be so alien. Ah well, I suppose the superb phrob of the Plo Mohr would be beyond him anyway. Only the elite are permitted to savor the nuances of this distinctive musical culture.

Diefenbaker's Leadership: Four Points in His Favor

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

AFTER four years of conspiracy and counter-conspiracy, four months of plot and anti-plot, and now four weeks of wheeling and dealing for a compromise, the civil-servant Conservatives have reached their moment of truth on John Diefenbaker and his leadership.

Four big things have sustained him:

1. He's a winner ... or at least the closest thing to a winner they've had in the last 30 years.

2. He's a fighter ... and the dissidents among them know it almost as well as the bruised Liberals.

3. He has had the party's big parliamentary battalions — the "Cowboys," as they call his Loyalist Guard from the Prairies.

4. He may be (all right then, he is) often irascible, sometimes intolerant, frequently even a thoroughly unpleasant, miserable, insufferable whatever you may care to call him ... but when did they ever pass a law requiring a party leader to be a cream-puffed sweetie?

The Liberals have what every body concedes is personally a "wonderful guy" as leader, and they're forever wishing he was rough and tough. (More like you-know-who.)

So maybe you just can't come to the aid of Syria if he's attacked. The two of them are to exchange ambassadors and set up a joint defence council and high command.

In the event of war, Egypt will assume overall direction of operations. It is rumored that an Egyptian air base may be established on Syrian soil.

Do these important developments — the final burying of the hatchet between Egypt and Syria after the break-up of their union in 1961 — mean a significant shift in President Nasser's policy? Has Nasser been converted to Syrian military vis-a-vis Israel? Does the pact increase or diminish the threat of war in the area?

Most observers believe that Nasser's intervention is a factor for peace, that he will moderate the Syrians rather than allow himself to be dragged by them into military adventurism. But this is still an open question. The next two or three months could be decisive.

A great part of Nasser's diplomatic activity in the Arab world over the past three years has been directed at restraining the Syrians and steering the Arabs away from the brink of war.

In 1963 a clash seemed imminent over Israel's plan to divert water from the River Jordan to the Negev desert. But Nasser's considered view — which he still holds — is that the Arabs are not ready for a military showdown. He summoned the first Arab summit in January 1964 and forced through a more moderate "defensive" policy.

For nearly three years, right up to this last summer, Nasser used the mechanism of successive Arab summits to temper the Syrians and inject their revolutionary fervor with cautious realism. But Arab solidarity is now at an end, destroyed by the venomous feud between Nasser and King Faisal of Saudi Arabia. Nasser has therefore had to have recourse to a bilateral pact to regain some influence over the Syrians.

The threat this time comes no longer from the Jordan waters — that issue has been quietly shelved — but from the activities of Palestinian guerrillas raiding Israel from Syrian territory. Several groups appear to him in ways he won't seem to understand.

Like the other day when he learned that an old friend (he thought) that he had appointed the Senate little more than three years ago, now was among the conspirators plotting against his political life.

"Astounding," shrugged Dief. "You know I haven't done him a favor since the spring of '63, so why should he want my head?"

They may want it, but because of those four points, they'd rather do a deal than do him in.

Egypt-Syria Pact

Can Nasser Curb His Fiery Ally?

By PATRICK SEARLE from Damascus

SYRIA's new five-year defence pact with Egypt is without doubt a shot in the arm of the military wing of an organization called al-Fatah.

Syria's Baathist government has given open support to the guerrillas over the past few months and embraced their slogan of a popular liberation war against Israel. A rash of incidents has disturbed the fragile peace. From the Arab side, it looked as if each explosion inside Israeli territory could unleash an Israeli riposte.

An Israeli appeal to the UN Security Council was frustrated by a Soviet veto. Israel reacted by extending the term of national service for men from 24 to 30 months.

Once again then as over the Jordan waters, a real danger exists of a border clash or an air strike escalating into a large-scale confrontation. President Nasser is almost certain to advise caution, but can the guerrillas — increasingly well-armed and trained — now be brought under control and does the Syrian government even want to try?

The next month or two will show whether the new link with Cairo will lower the political temperature in Damascus and bring a measure of peace to the Israeli border. There is no real cause for optimism: Syrian and Egyptian views on Palestinian strategy remain far apart in spite of the defence pact.

Another trend to watch will be whether the pact checks Syria's headlong course to the left. President Nasser, in spite of his sustained quarrel with the West and his flirtations with the Soviet Union, seems to retain a measure of non-alignment. His freedom of action is not wholly circumscribed by his close Soviet connections although many would say that it was restricted. Syria, in contrast, makes no pretence at non-alignment.

These differences of posture and point of view may put the new Syrian-Egyptian relationship under strain. But for Nasser, there could be considerable political gains. Ever since the break-up of the United Arab Republic five years ago, a prime objective of his policy has been to regain influence in Damascus. Without this foothold in Arab Asia his whole Arab policy has been paralyzed.

He has not been able to exert decisive influence on Iraq, or on Jordan, or on Kuwait or even on Lebanon. Syria, in the heart of the Arab world, sits astride a complex of Arab power lines and it is no accident that both Egypt and the Soviet Union, friends but also rivals in this region, should both hurry to her aid.

For nearly three years, right up to this last summer, Nasser used the mechanism of successive Arab summits to temper the Syrians and inject their revolutionary fervor with cautious realism. But Arab solidarity is now at an end, destroyed by the venomous feud between Nasser and King Faisal of Saudi Arabia. Nasser has therefore had to have recourse to a bilateral pact to regain some influence over the Syrians.

The threat this time comes no longer from the Jordan waters — that issue has been quietly shelved — but from the activities of Palestinian guerrillas raiding Israel from Syrian territory. Several groups appear to

Costly Clamor

Propaganda Voices Clutter Airwaves

By CASSANDRA from London

I HAVE been listening to the battle of the short waves — both here and in the United States.

I never realized the intensity of this round-the-clock war which must run into billions of dollars, pounds, dollars, francs, dinars, marks, florins, lire, rupees, yen, drachmas, piastres, pesetas, guilders — whatever the Chinese use for money.

As a matter of fact they use yuan, and they spend heavy loads of them for Peking transmits loud and clear on 820 kilocycles, and the People's Republic steadily and remorselessly belts out the doctrines of Mao Tse-tung in English.

They also send the message out on twenty-four other stations, including four in Tibet. I listened to this stuff. It comes in twanging American accents, and goes to great pains to make clear Mao's contempt and detestation of the West.

The United States and the Soviet Union are, not unexpectedly, the heavy-weights in this language verbal conflict.

America broadcasts in 38 languages from over 100 transmitters for a total of 845 hours a week.

Russia broadcasts in 60 languages from 105 transmitters for 1,374 hours a week.

In addition the Poles, the Czechs, the Hungarians and the lesser iron curtain countries join in this mighty chorus. East Germany does her bit too, and recently I heard a delegation of Clydeide Communists, who were visiting Ulbricht's shackled paradise, describing the delights of life in Leipzig as compared with life in Glasgow.

The programs from Moscow and the main Russian centres are usually convincing, and a recent compelling theme was the linking of Negro oppression in Mississippi, the riots in Los Angeles and the horrors of napalm warfare in Viet Nam.

It was spoken in rich, strong prose almost in the form of a narrative poem with a haunting background of the blues played on a clarinet.

There was no attempt at disguising the open propaganda of the theme.

Not so with the Americans. The voice of America aims at being purely objective and tries to emulate the BBC program which, in their apparent detachment, won such a following during the last war.

From what I have heard they have a long way to go yet. The spokesman of the Voice of America, John Chancellor, says:

"Our broadcasts must mirror the vivacity, the vigor, the tempo, the rhythms of this moment."

"It is my intent that we swing a little. We will be amusingly avant-garde. We will be the first with the latest, current and contemporary. If we were to omit our output to mom's apple pie and two cars in every garage we'd get caught by the listeners. So why try to lie?"

I'm afraid it doesn't come out like that.

All too often there are turgid discussions by dull experts, observations and data most phony of phony, the "Kremlinologists," who know all the answers from their forums and their common rooms in Kansas City, Yale, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and other ringside observation posts. Out-and-out propaganda is preferable to their devious attempts at slanting the news.

I love the sly feeling of New York. The news has a tang of its own.

Last week there was the barber in the Bronx who had just bought an electric chair from a penitentiary that has closed down. He now shaves his customers in it.

There was the item that Ing-Borg, the president of an eyelash corporation, has discovered that men are wearing false eyelashes because: "It gives them more powerful eyes and it helps in business."

There was the Hero Boy Restaurant advertising: "A six foot party sandwich that feeds 30 hungry Heroes and Heroines. The six footer comes fresh and tarty ready to serve and eat. Order one or more for your party, save yourself the work and bother of cooking and preparation. We will make and deliver the 6-ft. Hero on 24 hours' notice. A bread knife that's yours is included in each order."

And finally there was — and is — the sombre little man on 42nd Street who carries a supply of Bibles and a banner which reads: "I will present free a copy of the New Testament to every

New Migration

French Fields Greener

By ANDREW MULLIGAN
from Aix-en-Provence

TO many Europeans, France is merely a threshold to the cheap, sun-drenched extremities of Southern Europe. The Swedes and West Germans head briskly for Spain, and the British and Dutch scurry across to Italy, still believing that France is an outrageously expensive tourist trap, beyond their means. This may have been true, but it is now a fallacy, especially in the provinces.

A more enterprising type of foreigner has probed a little deeper and decided to settle. There are Belgians and Scandinavians in Provence, and British and Dutch in the Lot and the Dordogne. They have realized that climatically, gastronomically and in terms of value for money, inland France is an ideal place to settle. But they are driving land prices up. This is the time of year that the local negotiators are harvesting the fruits of the summer influx of foreign visitors and rich Parisians, who came in search of a quiet retreat, surrounded by olives, pines and chirruping cicadas.

Building is spreading inland, up the Var valley from Nice towards Grasse, St. Paul de Vence, which began as an artists' Mecca, has long since been developed, and now the houses spread along the full line of the Basses Alpes about 12 miles inland and send land prices rocketing. One negotiator, who sold 20 four-acre properties to foreigners during July, told me that land prices 15 miles away towards Nice are already five times what they are in his relatively untouched village.

Buyers appear to be less interested in land for plain building on the coast than in isolated properties where they can dabble in vines and tend their olives. Hence prices of building land, which had risen sharply in previous years, have tended to remain steady, whereas the rise in prices for agricultural land continues unabated.

The free movement of capital within the six Common Market countries makes it possible for interested foreign buyers — including West German farmers — to purchase French agricultural land at roughly 30 per cent less than they would have to pay in West Germany. The local farmers' unions are protesting strongly against trends towards higher prices, arguing that this makes it more and more difficult for young farmers to buy land at normal prices and to establish themselves.

Becoming a property owner in France can be a complex business. It depends as much on whether the local like the look of you as on whether they think you will be a beneficial influence on their commune. Added to this is the incredibly tenuous question of French land tenure, whereby parcels of land of less than an acre are often co-owned by up to 10 members of a family, all of whom have to agree to the principle of sale and the price.

The sale has to be approved by a government agency, whose principal aim is to prevent speculation and which buys up land at the current market prices and offers it for resale to farmers who are anxious to enlarge their holdings.

Financial assistance in long-term, low-interest credits is readily available for improving property and refurbishing farm buildings. The village commune is obliged by law to provide electricity for a holding if it is declared a "principal residence." In short, buying a smallholding in France can be an easy way to house oneself, with loans available up to $12,000 at 5 per cent over 15 years.

The richer peasants — and there are surprisingly many — are hanging on to their land. One I spoke to said he wanted $75,000 for a well-situated shack without water and electricity amid four acres of brush. "I won't get it now," he said, "but then I don't need the money. But I'm absolutely confident that I'll get my price one day."

There was the item that Ing-Borg, the president of an eyelash corporation, has discovered that men are wearing false eyelashes because: "It gives them more powerful eyes and it helps in business."

There was the Hero Boy Restaurant advertising: "A six foot party sandwich that feeds 30 hungry Heroes and Heroines. The six footer comes fresh and tarty ready to serve and eat. Order one or more for your party, save yourself the work and bother of cooking and preparation. We will make and deliver the 6-ft. Hero on 24 hours' notice. A bread knife that's yours is included in each order."

And finally there was — and is — the sombre little man on 42nd Street who carries a supply of Bibles and a banner which reads: "I will present free a copy of the New Testament to every him in ways he won't seem to understand.

Like the other day when he learned that an old friend (he thought) that he had appointed the Senate little more than three years ago, now was among the conspirators plotting against his political life.

"Astounding," shrugged Dief. "You know I haven't done him a favor since the spring of '63, so why should he want my head?"

They may want it, but because of those four points, they'd rather do a deal than do him in.

For nearly three years, right up to this last summer, Nasser used the mechanism of successive Arab summits to temper the Syrians and inject their revolutionary fervor with cautious realism. But Arab solidarity is now at an end, destroyed by the venomous feud between Nasser and King Faisal of Saudi Arabia. Nasser has therefore had to have recourse to a bilateral pact to regain some influence over the Syrians.

The threat this time comes no longer from the Jordan waters — that issue has been quietly shelved — but from the activities of Palestinian guerrillas raiding Israel from Syrian territory. Several groups appear to him in ways he won't seem to understand.

Tories Bled in Public

Brutality Flaunted

By DAVE MCINTOSH, from Ottawa

The raw brutality of politics has seldom been so exposed to public wonderment as it has been at the Conservative convention.

The axing and betrayals, the sudden shifts of power and the agonizing compromises normally take place in quiet rooms far from the rowdiness of the convention floor where the party is on public display.

It was all terribly, awesomely different this time. A delegate in the lobby of the convention hotel proclaimed loudly to a colleague in the hearing of a reporter: "I knifed the s.o.b. and he had it coming."

Some of Conservative Leader Diefenbaker's loyalists, beside themselves with anger and bitterness, openly accused their opponents of betrayal — and worse.

These incidents occurred at cocktail parties to which everybody and anybody was invited and in the halls and antechambers just off the convention floor.

For Mr. Diefenbaker and national President Dalton Camp, these cruel experiences occurred in the convention itself. Mr. Camp was accused of stabbing Mr. Diefenbaker in the back.

Mr. Diefenbaker was struck almost speechless at one point in his Monday night speech to delegates by boos, hisses and moans of "Oh, God, there he goes again."

In bafflement, Mr. Diefenbaker cried: "Is this a Conservative meeting?"

How could the former prime minister, winner of a record 208 seats in the 265-member Commons only eight years ago, believe what was happening?

He had covered up the hurt Monday night. But on Wednesday he conceded he had been wounded, if not slain. The slings and arrows of this convention were not of outrageous fortune. They were deliberate and meant to maim. Many delegates started home wondering whether the hurts will be healed in their lifetimes.

The aim of the convention — to sling the chief over the political precipice — had been achieved.

But at what cost?

Soviet Welcome 'Fantastic'

Martin Out-VIPs Them All

By PETER WORTHINGTON
From Moscow

Canada's Paul Martin left Moscow amidst a gushing of goodwill that would have made lesser mortals blush.

He and Soviet Minister Andrei Gromyko quipped and joked at the Leningradsky railway station while Soviet citizens and diplomats gazed on enthralled — possibly because it's not the most usual sight in the world to see Gromyko chuckling and cracking jokes.

While Mrs. Gromyko, a warm, good-natured person, kept chuckling over the Martins and warning them to dress warmly and not to work too hard, Canadian Ambassador Robert Ford lurked in the background muttering such observations as: "Fantastic. I've not seen anything quite like it."

As far as the visit of Canada's Minister for External Affairs goes, no one in Moscow has seen anything "quite like it."

Martin was feted as no Western foreign minister ever was in Moscow.

It was not that he was wined and dined so lavishly — though there was that, too — but that the top people all wanted intense discussions with him.

Martin met them all — including Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev for 75 minutes, which is most extraordinary. Usually Brezhnev, who is outside (and above) government functions, confers only with other Communist leaders or President de Gaulle.

He spent 30 minutes telling Martin about Soviet economic and internal aspirations, then spent 45 minutes of cut-and-thrust debate over world issues — Viet Nam, disarmament, UN peace-keeping roles, European security and nuclear treaties.

"The Soviets seem anxious to discuss problems now, and while we don't necessarily see things in the same light, there seems a mutual desire to solve these complicated issues," said Martin.

He invited either Premier Alexei Kosygin or President Nikolai Podgorny to visit Expo 67 next summer, and indications are that the invitation will be accepted.

BACKGROUND

Western View Of Communism Gets Fresh Look

By GENE SHERMAN, from London

Western attitudes toward communism and the East European countries seem to be undergoing a sort of self-examination.

The impression available in diplomatic circles is that the differences with Communist countries are being reviewed subtly in a new light.

Influential Western observers appear to be taking a more amenable line with iron curtain problems and discussing them in relation to capitalist virtues and shortcomings rather than as fixed impediments to world progress.

Acceptance of communism, or surrender to it, is not implied. But there is increasing emphasis on what can be learned from it and how it can be used to the advantage of the West.

"If we are to go in for planning we had better look at how the professionals do it," Jo Grimond, leader of the Liberal Party and a dogged advocate of free enterprise, wrote recently in The Guardian.

Changes Impress

"Not that the Communist professionals have succeeded in providing more goods and services than capitalism. If countries like Poland, Hungary and Romania had not fallen under communism they would have been materially better off today."

"But equally do not let us swing to the other extreme. The advance of technology will mean that any country which can keep free of war and preserve law and order should certainly raise its standard of living."

Recently returned from a trip behind the iron curtain, Grimond was impressed at the changes being made there. The planning necessary to execute them, he noted, is easier if based on a strong conviction of what is right and the duty to convert others to that viewpoint.

Like other observers who have travelled eastern Europe, he brought back the impression that the Communist countries are not only offering more and more consumer choice and incentives but are concentrating on the necessary ingredients for higher living standards.

One of these is education, which he found being provided with pointed determination. By concentrating resources on such clear objectives the Communists can achieve notable success.

"I come back from the Communist countries more than ever convinced that the root difficulties in planning are political and not economic," Grimond wrote.

Problems Identical

"I also believe that all economies in the world are now facing the same kinds of problems. It seems to me that a great many of the ordinary clichés about planning are untrue."

"For instance, I see no reason to suppose that planning is necessarily more essential for an underdeveloped than for a fully developed country."

"If they were prepared to face the social consequences, I dare say the best way in which the underdeveloped countries of Africa could achieve rapid industrialism would be by the most rampant capitalist methods."

"I certainly see no evidence that Communist planning is particularly efficient. But equally I think the capitalist world has to look closely at the social results of its system and at the stresses, waste and dissatisfaction which it causes."

"If communism can teach capitalism to put the vast wealth the latter generates to better use, then a marriage would be most desirable."

Similar sentiments are being expressed with increasing regularity. Coupled with the bitter split between Russia and Red China, stepped-up Soviet-American trade plans and new Soviet interest in nuclear control they are seen as the beginning of a major adjustment in public thinking about the East.

Abusive Youth Jailed

A youth who said he was being framed was sentenced to four months in jail Wednesday in central magistrate's court by Magistrate William Oester for assaulting a police officer.

James Erdman of 1156 May was cautioned by Magistrate

Oester about being abusive to the court when he said, after being found guilty of the charge, "This must be Russia."

A few seconds earlier, his father was ejected from the court after he interjected unsolicited remarks into the proceedings, including "This is a frameup."

Erdman made the same statement in the witness box during his trial.

CLAIMED ASSAULT

Erdman was charged with assaulting Victoria Constable Murray McArthur Nov. 11 in the police station as he was being booked for intoxication. He claimed he had been assaulted himself by three police officers, two of whom had held him while the third struck him several times.

He admitted to 10 previous convictions of an unrelated nature.

Vernon Thomas Morgan of 2312 McNeil was sentenced to one day in jail and released on his own recognizance to keep a $250 peace bond for assault causing bodily harm.

August Strodik of 1447 Monterey said he was knocked down and pummeled by Morgan in his residence Oct. 30.

Under cross-examination Strodik admitted he knew Morgan's wife, whom he had met through a newspaper ad, and had known her well. He denied having an affair with her.

UNDER CARE

Morgan said his wife is under psychiatric care, and his feelings Strodik's influence is detrimental to her health. Following a recent reconciliation between himself and his wife, he said, Strodik had continued to try to date his wife.

Morgan admitted the assault, claiming it arose from a buildup of pressures.

Melvin Smith of Saanich was sentenced to three months in jail for assaulting a police officer and one month for disturbing the peace, the sentences to run concurrently.

At the Dorchester was the Millinery Guild fashion show — waiting for eight gowns to match eight hats. At Grosvenor was the United Charities' rummage sale.

By the time the mixup had been sorted out, five of the 800 dresses had been sold for the bargain price of $15 each.

Fish and Wildlife Branch officials issued a warning Wednesday about the extreme danger involved in carrying loaded firearms in motor vehicles.

Dr. James Hatter, branch director, said in a press release he is concerned with the number of charges laid against "irresponsible individuals found carrying loaded firearms in motor vehicles."

LEADING OFFENCE

He said that despite repeated warnings about the illegal practice, "conservation officers throughout the province are finding that this particular violation still leads all the other offences under the Firearms Act."

Dr. Hatter was out of town and unavailable for comment, but other officials in the branch said no statistics are yet available about the number of charges laid this year because the hunting season has just passed the halfway mark.

FIELD REPORTS

But they said indications have been coming in from field staffs throughout the province that an unusually high number of charges are being laid.

Dr. Hatter urged all hunters to check their own firearms "as well as the firearms of other hunting companions before entering a motor vehicle."

Parties Still Apart

MONTREAL (CP) — Union Windsor, Ont., machinists and management remained at forced cancellation of two flights planned daily between Windsor and Toronto by Nor-dair Ltd. of Montreal, when they refused to service the "strike-breaking" planes. In the House of Commons, the federal transport board Tuesday granted operating certificates to Eastern Provincial, Nordair, Austin, Transair and Pacific Western Airways to begin emergency air services across the country.

CPA Puts Embargo On Canadian Cargo

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Pacific Airlines officials said Wednesday an embargo has been placed on all trans-continental cargo. A spokesman said with the heavy responsibility of carrying mail due to the Air Canada strike, and also the priority given to cargo from European and Far Eastern points, "it has become impossible to find space for cargo travelling east and west in Canada."

"CPA only flies once daily across the country, and the incoming flight Wednesday brought 6,000 pounds of air mail," he said. The spokesman said the embargo does not affect cargo bound for northern B.C. and The Yukon, but only east-west inter-city cargo. Post office officials said the mail is moving in and out of Vancouver on time despite the strike.

Nicholson rejected Progressive Conservative demands for action to end the strike, saying that the government should not inject itself into the "somewhat tense atmosphere" between company and union representatives. He said he hopes one or other of the two parties will approach the labor department. He had decided against appointing a federal mediator at this time.

An Air Canada spokesman said the strike is costing the company $300,000 a day, net, representing operating revenue loss of $750,000 a day less operating costs. At the national strike headquarters of the International Association of Machinists in Montreal, Mike Pritchard, head of the negotiating committee, said Wednesday: "The next move is up to the company. We have held no meetings today and are waiting for company approaches." For Air Canada, a spokesman said: "The company held meetings today to discuss the situation but there were no developments. The next move is up to the union."

LBJ Fine — But Whispering

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson came through two operations on his throat and abdomen in satisfactory shape Wednesday. The doctors reported no signs of cancer. Thirty-three minutes after one operation removed a polyp on a vocal chord and a second operation removed a polyp on a gall bladder operation, Johnson was out from under an anesthetic and scribbling notes to his doctor. And a little before noon EST, four hours out of surgery, he was smiling, touching, thumb and forefinger in an "okay" sign, and talking briefly with a group of reporters in a hoarse whisper. The president still has some physical problems. The doctors ordered him "to make no formal speeches for a period of four to five weeks and to keep the use of his voice at a minimum." Bill D. Moyers, White House press secretary, said. Moyers said the president will have three or four weeks of pain and discomfort as a result of the throat operation. He also has bursitis in his right shoulder which Moyers said will require some heat treatment and physical therapy. The doctors expect to keep Johnson in hospital several days and then let him go back to the LBJ ranch near Johnson City, Tex., to recuperate as he did a year ago.

Double Trial Now Triple

LONDON (Reuters)—A judge Wednesday stopped the trial of two men accused of a triple police killing, so they could be tried in a new three-man hearing with Harry Roberts.

Roberts, 30, who eluded Britain's manhunt of the century for more than three months, was found hiding under straw in a barn 25 miles north of London Tuesday.

His arrest and charging with murder in the gunning down of three policemen in a London street last August came a day after the trial of two other men on similar charges opened, thus jostling a major legal headache.

JUDGE AGREES
The judge hearing the case against the two men—John Edward Duddy, 36, and John Duddy, 37—agreed with the consent of defence counsel to a prosecution suggestion the trial be abandoned and the accused go on trial with Roberts.

The judge said his main consideration in deciding whether there should be separate trials was whether justice might be better done to all three accused.

IN CUSTODY
Roberts, ginger-bearded and wearing jeans tucked into boots, appeared in a magistrate's court Wednesday morning and was ordered held in custody for a week for another hearing.

Leslie Boyd, clerk of London's Old Bailey central criminal court, said the director of public prosecutions was preparing a voluntary bill of indictment—a time-saving device used to bring a new accused into a trial where a magistrate's court has already heard evidence against other accused.

This was expected to be studied by a high court judge Wednesday night, and, if approved, could mean the trial date would be arranged today.

Postal Beefs Few

"Best Deal Possible"

OTTAWA (CP)—Despite expressions of dissatisfaction from some postal union branches over their 25-cent-an-hour wage increase announced Tuesday, union leaders here say chances of wildcat walkouts are small.

"Certainly they're unhappy," William Kay, president of the 11,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said Wednesday. "But reluctantly they will accept the settlement because they authorized us to negotiate the best deal possible. We did that."

$10 PER WEEK
The postal unions had sought a 50-cent-an-hour interim increase. They gained 25 cents an hour and a 10 month agreement from Oct. 1, 1966, to July 31, 1967. The increase amounts to about $10 a week.

Roger Decarie, president of the 9,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada, said that was a whole lot better than the full terms of the settlement and the reasons for it, our members are prepared to accept the settlement."

MORE TO LOSE
"Nobody is satisfied but we had more to lose in going out," he said. "The postal unions were to set a strike date Wednesday and reliable reports said Friday was the target."

Both leaders said there was an "implied threat" by the government that had settlement not been reached special legislation would have been brought in to halt any walkout.

One of the sharpest reactions to the settlement came from the Vancouver postal branch. Branch presidents of both postal workers and letter carriers in Vancouver were unhappy with the agreement. Mr. Kay said this was understandable because Vancouver has one of the highest wage rates in Canada.

Several branches have said the national executive should have sought approval of the wage offer before signing the agreement.

Mr. Decarie said that in the event of any wildcat walkouts those involved "won't get any support from the national office. They'll be on their own. We signed an agreement with the government and we're going to stick to it."

Others Say No

OTTAWA (CP)—The Public Service Alliance of Canada announced Wednesday it has "flatly rejected" a government pay offer to some of its members similar to that accepted by postal unions Tuesday night.

The alliance represents most of the 30,000 skilled and semi-skilled employees in the same Group D pay-grouping as the postal workers.

NOTHING SPECIFIC
Claude Edwards, president of the 115,000-member alliance, told a press conference the government had offered the alliance a contract of "possibly a year." Negotiations had never reached specific dollar figures because the alliance rejected any fixed-term contract.

Postal workers won a 25-cent-an-hour settlement Tuesday and a 10 month contract from Oct. 1, 1966 to July 31, 1967. The increase is about 10 per cent.

Rugs Laid on Broadloom Fought Chill of Charity

OTTAWA (CP)—A tale of sumptuous living and sustained tax evasion was unfolded Wednesday in a judgment by the tax appeal board against a supposed charitable and religious organization near Montreal.

The judgment told of rich oriental rugs placed on top of wall-to-wall broadloom at the elaborate 160-acre estate of the Christian Homes for Children at Vandreuil.

Rev. Harold George Martin, founder and chief officer of the institution, kept what he called a "Hell" file of rude and brusque replies to letters from donors wondering what was being done with their money.

Mr. Martin's five children were all given expensive educations although he said he never drew more than $2,000 a year in salary, said the judgment by board member W. O. Davis.

He denied an appeal by the Christian Homes against a claim by the revenue department that the institution should have paid tax on $250,400 between the years 1946 and 1961.

The board, which took 2,000 pages of evidence at a two-week hearing on the case last November, ordered Christian Homes back to another hearing to hear argument on the total of the assessments.

The revenue department says Christian Homes is not a charitable organization and therefore not tax free as claimed, but a profit-making institution.

Mr. Martin said he provided care for orphaned, destitute, neglected and needy children, that he operated a home for unwed mothers, that he provided Christian training and that he provided a summer camp at minimum expense for children.

The board found that children were taken into the summer camp "strictly on a paying basis" at $2 to $30 a week and if the money was not paid, Mr. Martin's lawyer "dunned and harassed those responsible for such payment in an effort to collect what was owing."

"Apparently a few children were permitted to attend the camp free of charge but were required to work in return for their keep."

Mr. Martin was identified as a minister of the Union of Regular Baptists, ordained in 1942 in Toronto, and since a prison chaplain, superintendent of a mission in Toronto, chairman in the armed forces, and a missionary with the China Native Evangelistic Crusade.

He established the Christian Homes in 1945 near Orillia, Ont., but moved to Quebec when he was unable to obtain a licence in Ontario to run a "year round home for children."

Thrift Meals Going?

By JOHN MATTERS

Saatchi's meals-on-wheels program is part of a trend in welfare services that's keeping people out of hospitals and other institutions.

Coun. Edith Gunning, chairman of the municipality's health and welfare committee, said Wednesday the service, which has delivered as many as 20 hot meals a day, has had many positive effects.

Some recipients have regained their health to such an extent that they now can cook their own meals and no longer need food delivered to their doors.

CLUB PROJECT
She was asked if she thought it would be an appropriate project for a service club.

"I think to ensure the continuation of this program would be an excellent and most gratifying project for a service club, especially in view of the fact that municipal government must be cautious about assuming extra social service costs."

COST FACTOR
Her committee this week suggested to Saatchi council that $200 be found to subsidize the service.

Coun. Gunning said meals-on-wheels needed a transition if the price of delivered meals was to be kept at 50 cents.

DEFENCE TRUCK
"Some people who get these meals can't afford much more," she added. "We'd hate to see the service decline because they haven't the money."

The meals are delivered by Saatchi firemen on their days off, using a Civil Defence feeding truck.

LIKES TO EAT

Way Cleared For Apollo

Names in the News

CAPE KENNEDY—To the cheers of relatives and members of the Gemini launch team, astronauts James Lovell and Edwin Aldrin returned by separate planes from the recovery carrier Wasp.

Gemini 12's successful flight, described by the two as fantastic, concluded the Gemini project and opened the way for the last and biggest U.S. step to the moon—Apollo.

As Lovell and Aldrin told of their experience, technicians on a launch pad three miles away prepared a giant Saturn I rocket that is to hoist the first Apollo spaceship with a three-man crew on a 14-day earth-orbital flight in January or February.

TORONTO — Andrew Thompson, 41, resigned as Ontario Liberal leader because of heart trouble but said he plans to continue as a member of the legislature. Liberal members will pick a House leader today.

Thompson

while possibilities as new leader include TV personality Charles Thompson, second to Mr. Thompson in 1964.

SUVA, Fiji Islands — British sailors James Clements and Fred Rowe, who showed their bare "tars" to hundreds of passengers on the liner Orizaba as it moved out Nov. 12, were fined £10 each.

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of criminal appeals refused to reconsider its ruling that gave Jack Ruby a new trial on his death sentence for the murder of presidential assassin Lee Oswald.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — Dr. Clancy Macpherson, credited with developing the first effective gas-mask in the First World War, died at his home.

CHICAGO — Criminal court judge Herbert Frachen overrode Union's shadowing of British warships Speck's lawyer and ordered a hearing to determine if the 24-year-old drifter is mentally competent to stand trial on charges of murdering eight nurses.

WISCASSETT, Me. — Rev. Louis Wainwright, pastor of the "littlest church in the world," died at 81. His miniature roadside church had a pulpit and seats for two.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — The High Court here sentenced white clerk Ivan Godfrey Dixon to 7½ years in prison for possessing hand grenades and banned political literature.

BATH, Me. — Sculptor William Zorach, whose creations grace leading museums, died at 79.

JAKARTA — The Indonesian government of Gen. Suharto is said to have crushed an attempt to regain power by officers loyal to the "old order" of President Sukarno. Two dozen officers, one a former Suharto aide, and a number of civilians planned to kidnap Suharto.

NEW YORK — Mrs. Jerome Weiss, 60, sister of the late actor John Garfield, jumped or fell to her death from a sixth-floor window on Park Avenue.

VANCOUVER — Frank Cox, 18, of Victoria, was committed for trial on a charge of possession of marijuana last January. A joint charge against Robert Brophy, 21, was dismissed.

LAS VEGAS — Comedian Joe F. Lewis, who has lost part of the "use of his right hand because of a stroke he suffered Nov. 7, has been assured by doctors he will recover eventually.

KUMAMOTO, Japan — Shigeru Yoshida, 63, gamekeeper at the municipal zoo, was fatally gored by a 65-pound stag while he was cleaning its cage.

LONDON — Gwyneth Evans, the lone Welsh Nationalist member of parliament, said Wales wants Commonwealth status and a seat in the United Nations, and should be allowed to join the Common Market on its own.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Anna Jay Kerner, 88, lyricist of My Fair Lady, Camelot and Brigadoon, married Karen Gunderson, 31, an assistant editor of Newsweek magazine.

LONDON — Defence Minister Denis Healey said the Soviet Union has stepped up its shadowing of British warships outside territorial waters.

It's Ma-ra'ca when you say it. It's miraculous when you taste it.

Maraca Deluxe White Label Rum is dry and light. Maraca Deluxe Black Label is dark and full-bodied. Both go down well with everybody.

Kempf

Former B.C. Lion Placekicker Lashes Out at Management

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former player with the British Columbia Lions has accused the management of the Western Football Conference club of treating its Canadian players "like dirt."

"In my three years with the Lions, I was lied to, cheated and kicked about. The Canadians are told 'take it or else'."

Well, I didn't... I told them to go to hell," says placekicker Peter Kempf, traded before the 1966 season to Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference.

Denny Boyd, a Vancouver sports columnist, says in his column Wednesday Kempf's criticisms of Lions' management were contained in two unsolicited letters from Kempf and a telephone interview with him from Denver, Que.

DISCIPLINE PROBLEM
In a column several weeks ago, Boyd said Kempf was traded because he had become a discipline problem with the Lions.

Kempf, who joined Lions in 1963 and was the team's leading scorer for three successive years, denied he was traded because of a discipline problem.

"I was traded, not because of fighting with the police or teammates, not because of poor service to the club, not because of drunkenness, nor because of missed curfews or club meetings but because I finally told management 'enough is enough'."

LOW PAY SCALE
"For all of their money, the Lions have the lowest pay scale for Canadians in the country."

"In my first year, I was paid $3,500. At the end of that year, I was told that I had had a lucky year and that I might be a flash in the pan."

In 1963, Kempf was named the WFC rookie of the year. "I was offered $5,500 for my second year and I asked two of my teammates, Pete Oiler and Harvey Scott, what they were making."

Oiler was making much more and Scott was making that much for sitting on the bench as a reserve line-man," said Kempf.

"When I told this to Herb Capozzi (Lions general manager), he told me that these players, my friends, were lying to me."

PAY FOR WINNING
"Finally I settled for the contract of $5,500 with a clause saying I would receive $6,000 if I led the league in scoring. But I had to take the chance."

He had played centre previously with Providence of the American League and Victoria, Calgary, Winnipeg and Vancouver in the Western League.

Clemente

Clemente Named Most Valuable

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Clemente, flashy right fielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was named Wednesday the National League's Most Valuable Player, edging Los Angeles Dodgers' Sandy Koufax by 10 points.

Clemente, whose timely and explosive hitting helped the Pirates come close to winning the pennant, received one less first-place vote than 27-game winner Koufax but won on total points, 218 to 208. Clemente had eight votes for first, Koufax nine.

Koufax won the MVP award in 1963 and finished second to Clemente, flashy right fielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was named Wednesday the National League's Most Valuable Player, edging Los Angeles Dodgers' Sandy Koufax by 10 points.

Hannigan
Death
Shocks Leafs

TORONTO (UPI) — Veteran Toronto Maple Leaf players were shocked to learn of the death Wednesday of former Leaf forward Gordie Hannigan.

The 37-year-old Hannigan died unexpectedly of heart failure in Edmonton earlier in the day.

Toronto defenceman Tim Horton, who played junior hockey with Hannigan and then was his teammate at Pittsburgh and Toronto, was excused from practice by assistant manager-coach King Clancy.

"I have lost one of the best friends I have ever had in hockey," said Horton.

Hannigan broke in with the Maple Leafs in 1952 and played left wing out of line with Elmer Bentley and George Armstrong, the current Leaf captain.

His best National Hockey League season was 1952-53 with Toronto when he scored 17 goals.

Rough Trip
Over
For Dodgers

SHIZUOKA, Japan (AP)—Los Angeles Dodgers, without five of their top players, wound up the most humiliating tour of Japan by a U.S. baseball team, suffering their fourth straight loss today.

Yomiuri Giants, Japan's 1966 professional baseball champions drubbed the Dodgers 7-3, ending the Americans' 18-game tour.

The defeat left the Dodgers with a record of nine victories, eight defeats and a tie.

Never before had an American major league team lost so many games on a tour of Japan. Never before had an American team lost four straight.

Police Score
In NHL Pool

MONTREAL (CP) — About 300,000 lottery tickets on the National Hockey League were seized in three police raids in Montreal and suburban Jacques Cartier. Biggest haul was in Jacques Cartier where provincial police found 200,000 tickets in two private homes.

UN Move Wants Peking In, Taiwan Out

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A revised draft of an Albanian resolution to seat Communist China in the UN was submitted to the General Assembly Wednesday. The revision specifically calls for the expulsion of the Nationalist Chinese from the UN and all its organizations.

The draft resolution is expected to move it formally when it opens the assembly's annual debate on the China - seating issue Friday.

Other co-sponsors are Pakistan, Romania, Cuba, Algeria, Congo (Brazzaville), Guinea, Mali and Syria.

The same 10 countries sponsored a similar resolution last year, along with Ghana and Somalia. That resolution failed on a 47-to-47 tie vote when a two-thirds majority was needed.

Backers of Nationalist China predict a vote of 53-to-48 against the new one. The assembly again will decide first whether a two-thirds or simple majority is needed for approval.

The new draft says the assembly "decides to restore all its rights to the People's Republic of China and to recognize the representatives of its government as the only lawful representatives of China to the UN, and to expel forthwith the representatives of Chiang Kai-shek."

There are persistent reports that either Italy, which also speaks in the debate Friday, or Canada, which speaks Monday, will ask the assembly to explore the possibility of seating both Peking and Nationalist Chinese delegations as representatives of separate countries.

The Canadian statement was made in the General Assembly's special political committee by Pierre Elliott Trudeau, parliament secretary to Prime Minister Pearson.

Canada has contributed men and money to all such operations so far.

Some member countries, notably the Soviet Union and France, have refused to pay for peacekeeping operations and the Russians have taken the same attitude toward the UN emergency force on the Israeli-Egyptian frontier, now in its 11th year.

Price Climb Blamed on War

NEW YORK (AP)—A group of food manufacturers and retailers, aware of the growing furor over rising food prices in the United States, defended those prices Wednesday and offered housewives little hope that the price spiral would stop soon.

George W. Koch, president of the Grocery Manufacturers Association, said the U.S. is not to blame for the price rise. "The farmer is not to blame," he said. "Every time this nation is at war, this nation's economy is inflated. Rising food prices are the result of this inflation, but they are not the cause of it." Koch said that farm prices are the result of this inflation, but are not the cause of it.

He said that farm, manufacturing and distribution costs are up and those higher costs are reflected in costs to consumers. Part of the reason, he said, is that the once-vast food surpluses of the U.S. have been depleted because of increased foreign and domestic demands to the point "where supply and demand have just about met."

Chamber Delays

Due to the funeral services Friday for Mayor Toose, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors' meeting scheduled that day has been postponed until noon Nov. 25 at the University of Victoria.

Pope Admonishes Jesuit Order

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul has warned the Jesuits, the largest religious order in the Roman Catholic Church, not to let their obedience to the papacy decline.

Pope Paul extended his warning to "other religious orders" as well. Speaking to 200 Jesuit delegates from all over the world, he said he had been struck by "surprise and grief" to learn of new trends in some religious societies.

The Pope said he had news of a creeping mentality among Jesuits questioning even the doctrinal privileges of the papacy. He blamed all those who think of obedience as an obstacle to personality and action.

"Do you want to be today and tomorrow and all the time what you have been from your foundation up to this day for the Roman Catholic Church and this Holy See?" the Pope asked.

Then he said: "This question of ours would not be justified if our ears had not heard news and rumors about your society, as well as other religious orders, about which we cannot conceal our surprise and, for some of them, our grief."

Pacification Aim Of Viet Troops

SAIGON (UPI) — All but the most highly-trained South Vietnamese troops will soon be removed from combat and begin a massive "pacification" drive in the countryside, U.S. military sources disclosed Wednesday. They said the U.S. command fully backs the program.

"The job is to get the army oriented so that it will not concentrate on killing Viet Cong but on protecting the rural development cadres, engineers and psychological warfare men in the contested areas," said a senior U.S. adviser.

The retraining program will begin next month and involve as many as 175,000 regulars by July of 1967. The allied offensive in Viet Nam will rest virtually on the Americans.

DESTROY CONG

Under the program, the government troops would be used to destroy Viet Cong influence on the local level, improve the peasants' standard of living and persuade them to back the Saigon government. U.S. troops will support the pacification effort but it will be 90 per cent Vietnamese, the sources said.

Crack Vietnamese mobile units — the marines, rangers and paratroopers — will continue to act as shock troops against the hard-core Communists but eventually they too are expected to get some pacification training.

Critics in the assembly say the government should have no veto power over their work and they want to continue sitting until a civilian government is elected.

Cong Guerrillas Fell U.S. Planes

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. army, marine and South Vietnamese units battled Communist troops Wednesday in two sectors 350 miles apart. Viet Cong guerrilla gunners downed two more U.S. aircraft and Viet Cong mortars shelled a U.S. regimental command post.

Ground action picked up after five days of bad weather that restricted bombing and reconnaissance missions over North Viet Nam, and also delayed supply shipments for the war in the South. Only 25 such missions were flown Tuesday, compared with the fair-weather record of 171.

Air losses in the South were a marine helicopter and an air force F-100 Super-Sabre jet.

The helicopter was the 24th and the plane the 134th officially acknowledged as fallen by enemy action in the South.

In Saigon Today

Public Meeting On Constitution

SAIGON (CP) — The writers of a new constitution for South Viet Nam planned to meet in open session today after a week of backstage manoeuvring aimed at avoiding a direct clash with the military government.

Many in the constituent assembly warn they will not rubber-stamp a constitution handed them by Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's regime.

After stormy sessions last week, the 117-member assembly adjourned to set a face-saving compromise.

Informal sources said a public knock-down, drag-out battle has been avoided, but that extremist elements are expected to continue sniping at the junta.

Much of the dispute centres on articles 20 and 21 of the assembly's bylaws. Article 20 gives Ky's regime power to amend the constitution and allows the assembly to overrule the amendments only by a two-thirds vote. Article 21 calls for dissolution of the assembly as soon as it finishes the new national charter.

Critics in the assembly say the government should have no veto power over their work and they want to continue sitting until a civilian government is elected.

Cabinet Posts Filled

SAIGON (LAT) — Premier Nguyen Cao Ky today replaced three of the four cabinet ministers who walked out of his government during last month's political dispute between northerners and southerners.

The three new ministers are southerners — as were their predecessors who quit Ky's government charging it was dominated by northerners like Ky himself. The crucial post of minister of economy, vacated by Au Truong Thanh, remained unfilled as the prime minister continued to seek a man of experience for the job.

NECESSARY STEP
Informal political sources viewed the filling of the cabinet vacancies as a necessary preliminary step to a series of moves Premier Ky hopes to make to strengthen his government.

These changes are said to include reducing drastically the political power of the four army corps commanders, and perhaps eventually going away with the 10 Vietnamese army division commands.

• The new members: Minister of education — Nguyen Van Tho, Saigon's leading dentist, holder of a DDS degree from Northwestern University, a Catholic who has long been interested in politics though he has never served in any administration.

• Minister for youth — Col. Ho Van Di Hinh, the son of the most famous novelist in the southern part of South Viet Nam, who has most recently been serving in the army materiel command.

• Minister for social welfare — Nguyen Xuan Phong, assistant to Premier Ky and former minister for labor.

Powers Score Israel

UNITED NATIONS (CP-UP) — Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union joined Wednesday in condemning Israel for a military attack on the Jordanian frontier village of el-Samu Sunday.

Lord Caradon, the British ambassador, told an emergency session of the UN Security Council that he could find "no justification whatever for the calculated, admitted and wholly disproportionate act of military reprisal committed by Israel against Jordan."

"NO JUSTIFICATION"

Soviet Ambassador Nikolai Fedorenko said Israel has committed "an act of open aggression."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg said his country could find no justification for, and could in no way condone, Israel's action.

Meanwhile the largest French naval task force seen in Middle Eastern waters since the Suez invasion of 1956 steamed Wednesday toward coastal Israel and Lebanon. French officials said it had nothing to do with the explosive Arab-Israeli border dispute.

Nader

For $26,000,000

Critic Sues GM

NEW YORK (AP) — Ralph Nader, car safety critic, has filed a $26,000,000 suit against General Motors Corp., and others, claiming violation of his privacy.

In the action filed in Manhattan Supreme Court, Nader said that the defendants violated his right of privacy and did "subject him to harassment and intimidation and intrude into and invade his seclusion, solitude and private affairs."

SMEAR CHARGED

The complaint also named as defendants Vincent Gilson, the Vincent Gilson Associates Inc. and Publicists, Inc.

Nader said that General Motors, when it learned of the imminent publication of his book, "Unsafe At Any Speed," decided to conduct a campaign of intimidating, smearing and otherwise severely injuring him.

HIGH FEES

Nader said that General Motors had hired the three other defendants at "fees much higher than their ordinary investigation fees because of the unsavory nature of the work involved."

He said that the firms interviewed people knowing him under false pretenses "questioning them about, and casting aspersions upon plaintiff's political, social, economic, racial and religious views, tendencies and possible prejudices; his integrity; his sexual proclivities and his personal habits, such as use of intoxicants, narcotics and the like."

SAFETY LAW

Nader is generally considered the man who spurred Congress into passing a car safety law in the last session.

A GM spokesman said the complaint has been referred to Simon Rifkind, a company lawyer, who said:

"General Motors has no legal liability to Mr. Nader and in due course the courts will vindicate our position."

Castellani Lawyer Appeals

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rene Castellani's conviction for the arsenic murder of his wife cannot be supported by the evidence presented at his trial, his lawyer said in a notice of appeal filed Wednesday.

Albert MacKoff, who defended Castellani, 41, in the capital murder trial, listed eight grounds of appeal against the verdict delivered by an all-male jury.

Castellani is scheduled to be hanged Feb. 21 for the slaying of his 40-year-old wife Esther, who died July 11 last year in Vancouver General Hospital of arsenic poisoning.

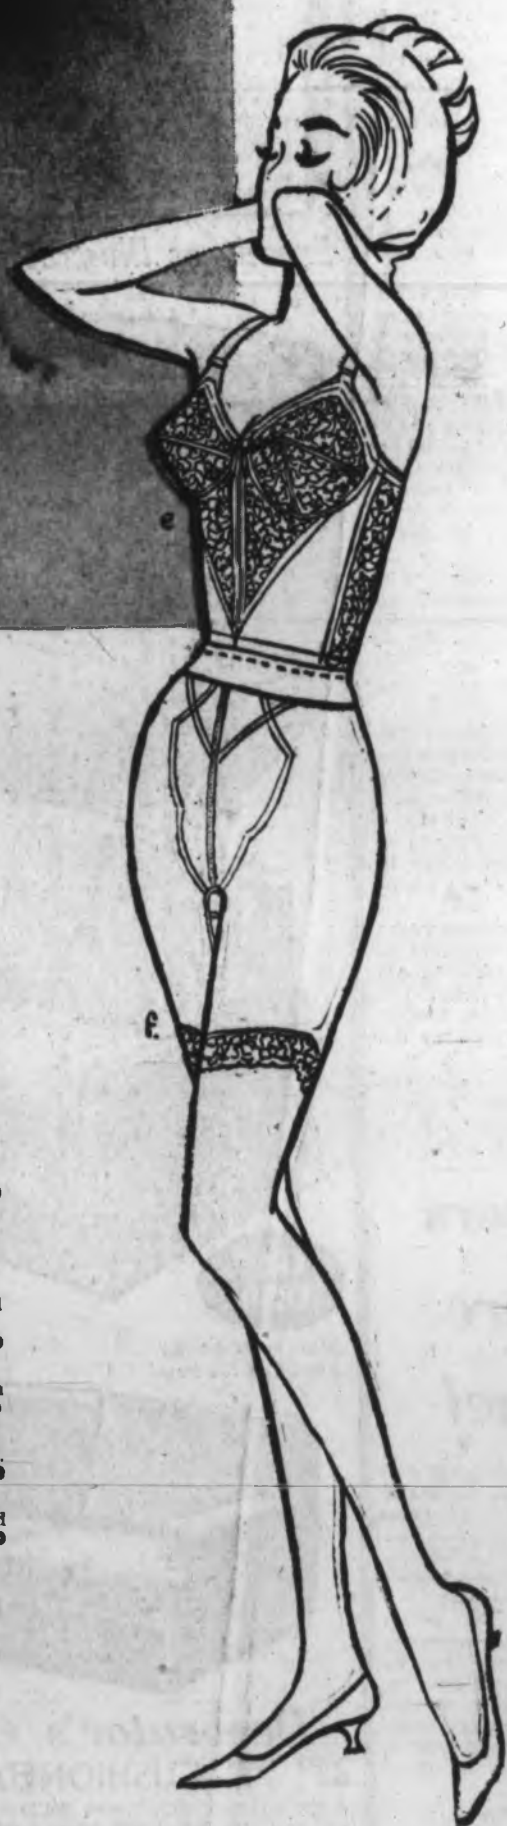

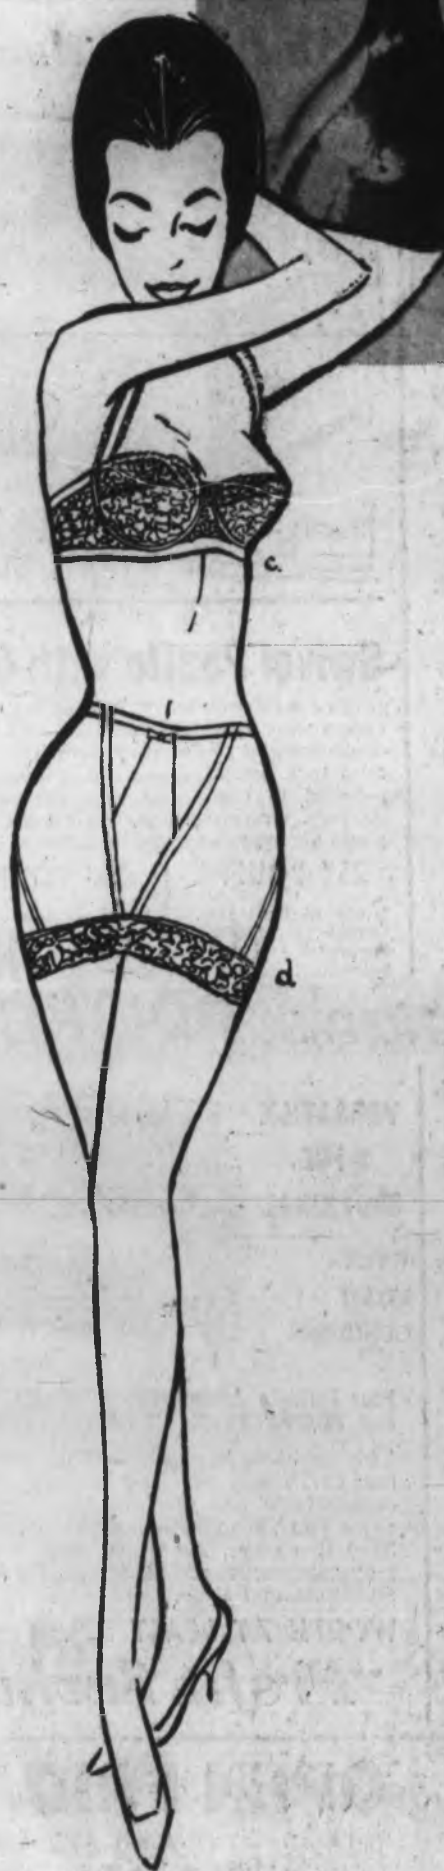

The jury made no recommendation for clemency.

Bombs Like Radios

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — U.S. Coast Guard Investigator Cmdr. R. E. Young said Wednesday the bomb that killed a Nationalist Chinese ship captain and crewman at sea Sunday was disguised as a transistor radio.

He said it was triggered when two switches on the radio case were turned on. Two disguised bombs were found below decks on the cargo ship Grand Integrity, en route to South Korea, and it returned here for an investigation.

U.S. navy specialists later deactivated the other bomb.

Famed Photographer Here

Animals in His Lens

By BOB PETHICK

It began about 20 years ago when a combination of interest in natural history and the reading of Osa Johnson's book, Married Adventure, fired the imagination of Des Bartlett.

Now with 120 miles of some of the most remarkable wildlife film in the world to his credit, the Australian photographer can look back at a most interesting career and forward to an even more interesting one—and it very nearly never happened.

Back in Brisbane, Mr. Bartlett's father, a teacher in natural history, interested him in the subject.

DROPPED DESIGN

He recalls his father had a famous collection of butterflies and used to exchange specimens with collectors all over the world.

"I was very keen on natural history," he said.

But mostly he was interested in aircraft design.

"Then one day I realized that that kind of life I would be cooped up in an office. So I stopped studying aircraft design and began studying photography."

RESPECT SHOWS

The way he tells it, it seems a perfectly logical thing to do. Throughout his miles of travel through Africa, Australia, New Guinea and now the United States, Mr. Bartlett has built up a respect for the animals he photographs, and it shows in his work.

Hundreds of still shots that will be published as a series of three books under the title, Nature's Paradise, deal in phenomenal detail with animals ranging from elephants to the smallest species of mole in the world. Also photographed on movie film and still are detailed series on fish and birds. Travelling through Africa with his wife, Jennifer, a willowy Australian lass, and daughter Julie, 9, who is the only girl in the world who can claim a wart-hog for a pet, Mr. Bartlett's biggest project was in filming the On Safari series with Arnold and Nichelle Derris, which appeared on BBC television and later on the CBC and American television.

His camera work was seen in Victoria recently in a National Geographic film on Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey's discoveries of early man.

His present project is a series of films for Anglia Television in England, titled Survival and dealing with animal conservation.

NEXT STEP

Next step on his trip will take him to northern California and the waterfowl migration, then on to New Mexico to film desert life.

The family has a standing joke about getting home to Australia for Christmas, but hasn't made it in 10 years. They planned to get home for Christmas this year so Julie, who receives her education by correspondence, could be with her grandparents.

"But there is so much to see here. We couldn't go back until we had seen it," says Mr. Bartlett.

While here he is staying with old family friends, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Day, 1514 McRae.

Civil Service Pledges Aid Agencies

Provincial government employees have shown their feelings toward their friends and neighbors in Greater Victoria by pledging to give $15,000 to assist charitable organizations in this area.

The money to be used for the support of numerous agencies throughout Greater Victoria in 1967 will be collected through a voluntary payroll deduction scheme which comes into effect on Jan. 1.

The Community Chest will receive $11,521.55, the Salvation Army $3,521.55, the Cancer Fund $5,623.55, Heart Fund $3,454.37, Canadian Red Cross $3,419.53, Crippled Children $1,111.14, Cerebral Palsy Association $263.47, Rehabilitation Foundation $200.10 and the Canadian Diabetic Association $230.55.

Fungi Topic Of Address

The Fascinating World of Fungi will be the subject of an address to be given by Dr. Alvin Funk of the Forest Research Laboratory to the Theta Park Nature Sanctuary Association at 8 p.m. today in the Douglas Building cafeteria.

Mr. Clark said magistrates here are anxious to find a solution to the problem.

"They want something done for the people who seem to be going to jail on an instalment plan," he added.

Mr. Clark said that while many Victoria alcoholics are people who migrate west to warmer climates, most were raised and schooled here.

"They're often people who've grown up here," he said. "They started drinking, then slipped further and further back economically until they're in the state they now find themselves."

Mr. Clark said magistrates here are anxious to find a solution to the problem.

City Teachers Make Progress

Sooke Pay Offer Approved

Sooke school district teachers approved an average 7.3 per cent pay increase offer Wednesday and Greater Victoria teachers and trustees made "some progress" toward settlement.

The 160 Sooke teachers haven't yet signed a contract with the board. Spokesman Robert Peach said several clauses remain to be agreed on, mainly in administrative allowances.

In Victoria, teachers' negotiator Gerald Guest said the board has agreed to increase pay for teachers at the lower end of the salary scale.

However, board and teachers remain deadlocked over pay for the high-income brackets, he said. No further meetings are scheduled, and arbitration talks will begin soon.

Skid Road Costly For City

Skid Road-type alcoholism in Victoria is costing taxpayers here about $100,000 a year.

The money is spent by welfare agencies and other community services which try to rescue the chronic alcoholic from the gutter.

Reg Clarkson, supervisor of the B.C. Alcoholism Foundation in Victoria, said Wednesday night there are 100 people convicted here each month of drunkenness.

Mr. Clarkson discussed the magnitude of the problem locally after Dr. R. M. Lane, medical director of the Victoria and Island Chest Clinic, said he believed the incidence of tuberculosis here was low because there wasn't large-scale alcoholism or poverty.

He was measuring alcoholism here against Vancouver's severe Skid Road problem.

Mr. Clarkson said the Salvation Army has a hostel which can accommodate 27 people, and it has been fully occupied each night this summer.

The Alcoholism Foundation's supervisor said downtown Victoria is the catch basin for down-and-out alcoholics from neighboring municipalities such as Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich.

Mr. Clarkson said the Greater Victoria Council on Alcoholism, a citizens' committee, is looking into the possibility of setting up a half-way house for local alcoholics.

It would be a place where people overcome with the disease of alcoholism would find professional help.

WORK, EXERCISE
Such a half-way house, said Mr. Clarkson, would offer psychotherapy in the form of group meetings. Some of these meetings would have the same elements as Alcoholics Anonymous get-togethers.

It also would offer work and exercise therapies. The idea is to get alcoholics off the bottle, then engage their minds in healthful activities.

The committee investigating a half-way house is made up of Rev. Marvin Evans of the Unitarian Church, Capt. Bert Morgan of the Salvation Army, James Audain, and Don Ellis, supervisor of emergency welfare services for the federal government.

Dr. D. E. Alcorn is a consultant to the group.

MOST RAISED HERE
Mr. Clarkson said that while many Victoria alcoholics are people who migrate west to warmer climates, most were raised and schooled here.

"They're often people who've grown up here," he said. "They started drinking, then slipped further and further back economically until they're in the state they now find themselves."

Appeal Now Only 'Dime' Shy

Greater Victoria's United Appeal now is short only 10 cents of every dollar required to keep 31 agencies of the Community Chest operating next year. Total at 5 p.m. Wednesday was $468,844 or 99 per cent of the $469,000 goal. The residential canvassers have passed their objective of $70,000 by $450 and there is more money still to be turned in. "Excellent results achieved reflect the enthusiasm and efficiency of the 2,000 volunteer canvassers, team captains, area and division chairmen," campaign committee co-chairmen Jack and Phoebe Noble said.

Situation Cleared Up Friday

City Business Sails On With Nobody at Helm

By A. H. MURPHY

Technically the City of Victoria is rudderless and will be until a formal meeting of city council Friday evening, when an acting mayor may be appointed.

City council has a rotation system under which each alderman assumes the office of acting mayor on a monthly basis. In the event of absence, illness or disability of the mayor, but in the opinion of city officials this arrangement becomes invalid when the office of mayor becomes vacant.

In that event, council must meet and appoint an acting mayor.

No formal meeting of council is scheduled until 8 p.m. Friday, so technically the city has been leaderless since the death of Mayor Toome on Tuesday morning, and will be so until Friday evening.

NO SIGNER

Under the rotation system, Ald. Cecil Parrott is occupying the office of mayor of the city, but officials feel that the British Columbia Municipal Act is clear on the matter and that Ald. Parrott is not, in fact, acting mayor until he is so appointed at a regularly convened meeting of city council.

This would mean, under a literal interpretation of the act, that there is no one empowered to sign legal documents, warrants or cheques.

In effect, however, the city's business is carried on by officials, and actions they take will be ratified at the next meeting of council.

DATE SET

At the same meeting, action will be taken to assign Dec. 10, the date of the municipal election, as the date for the by-election for the unexpired one year of the late Mayor Toome's term.

Meanwhile, it was announced that following the funeral of Mayor Toome at 2 p.m. Friday, in Christ Church Cathedral, interment will be in Royal Oak Burial Park. The family has requested that flowers not be sent but that donations be made to the Heart Fund.

Mayor Toome was the 41st chief magistrate of the city and the first to die in office.

'He Worked Hard'

Labor Council Bows In Toone Memory

Delegates to the Victoria Labor Council meeting Wednesday night stood for a minute's silence in tribute to the late Mayor Alfred Walter Toome.

Mr. Toome, who died Tuesday morning, was secretary-treasurer of the council for nine years before he left to take on the mayor's job this year.

"He will be missed by the workers of Victoria," said council president Robert Barrie. "He worked hard for this council."

NDP in Cariboo Given $10 Boost

By JOHN MATTERS

Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night contributed to a fund to help defeat Attorney General Bonner, seeking election in Cariboo constituency.

After hearing a letter from the Williams Lake and District Labor Council, which said the "NDP needs help," delegates decided to send $10 to the campaign fund.

The Williams Lake Council said it was making a province-wide plea for money.

Victoria unionists also:

● Adopted a resolution, to be sent to the federal government, urging China be seated in the United Nations;

● Heard reports from president Robert Barrie and secretary-treasurer Harry Anderson on the B.C. Federation of Labor convention in Vancouver earlier this month.

Mr. Barrie said none of those conditions applied in the case of striking car salesmen in Vancouver this summer who were served with injunctions.

House Cutback Hurts

A cutback in federal money available for home building has been a serious blow to the economy, the Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday night.

Ed Haw, president of the Victoria local, International Woodworkers of America, said Ottawa's suspension of loans has stifled all of the industries which are connected with house building.

"Home-building is the life blood of our economy," he told the meeting. "There is no justification for this... Too many Canadians are ill-housed."

Delegates decided to send letters to the prime minister and minister of finance to protest the freeze on Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. money.

Another delegate, Jack Groves, took issue with the views of Victoria lawyer E. E. Pearman, who earlier this week gave a talk on strikes, lockouts and injunctions.

He said Mr. Pearman was "not stating what takes place but what could take place."

For Needy

Mrs. Peter Bell, municipal organizing secretary, was a guest at the recent meeting of Royal Roads Chapter IODE. She gave several interesting suggestions regarding projects and membership.

Members of the chapter spend many of their spare hours making articles to be sent overseas. Among the items recently turned in were a knitted afghan, wool quilts, knitted baby set, coques, six stuffed animals. In addition 14 Raggedy Anne and Andy dolls were made for sale.

The chapter will be in charge of the French Room at the IODE Festival and members will be dressed in period costumes.

Mrs. Hayward donated a petti-point picture which will be raffled from chapter funds. A recent bake sale netted the sum of $73.

Mrs. B. Murgatroyd gave a paper on Unesco which is marking its 20th anniversary.

A rummage sale will be held in the Jubilee Hall, Esquimalt, at 9 a.m., Nov. 19.

Plans were made for a smorgasbord supper to be held at the home of Mrs. M. Zabel on Dec. 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Lister Wed at Qualicum

Of interest here was the recent marriage of Hilda Margaret Sutton and Mr. James Lister at St. Mark's Church, Qualicum Beach. Rev. William Hills officiated at the candlelit ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Pat Sullivan. She was attended by Mrs. James Petrie of West Vancouver and Mrs. J. Burdett.

Mr. A. J. Wickens was best man. Following the ceremony a small reception was held for relatives and friends. Mrs. E. Jarvis and Mrs. Kenneth Mitchell of Victoria poured tea and Capt. A. W. Bouch, proposed the toast to his sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Lister will live in Qualicum Beach.

Admiring one of the many festive wreaths to be sold at the Christmas VON Marche Luncheon on Monday, Nov. 21, are from left, Mrs. Frank Baylis, Mrs. Graeme Scott and Mrs. H. F. Hallatt. The luncheon will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Victoria Art Gallery by the Auxiliary to the Victorian Order Nurses. There will be a wide variety of Yuletide decorations featured in the Christmas Aisle—a highlight of the affair. — (Kinsman)

Heather from Scotland In Bride's Bouquet

A horseshoe of white heather, fawn from Argyle, Scotland, nestled in the crescent bouquet of pink carnations and ivy carried by Muriel Mary Mul-Bertrand when she exchanged vows with Zolten Jolndas Franklin Bannan in Fairfield United Church recently. She also carried a white Bible and had as a "something old" talisman, her great-grandmother's engagement ring.

White chrysanthemums and pink carnations were at the altar when Rev. H. W. Kerley united in marriage the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Bertrand, 1885 Quamichan Avenue, and the son of Mrs. Eva Bannan, who was here from Porcupine Plains, Sask.

Dr. I. A. N. Beadle played traditional organ music as the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. Her full-length gown of white silk chiffon was enhanced with scalloped French lace that circled the tiered hemline and neckline. Hand-sewn rhinestones, crystals and seed pearls shimmered on the chiffon bodice. The tiered veil, bordered in the same lace, misted to waist-length from a coronet of seed pearls. Her earrings, a gift of the groom, were also of seed pearls.

Gowns of chiffon, fashioned with belted sleeves, and teamed with toiling headpieces of flowers and net, were the choice of maid of honor Miss Louise Merriam, and bridesmaid, Miss Penne Muir of Ladner, the bride's cousin. Miss Merriam carried a colonial bouquet of pink chrysanthemums to complement her turquoise ensemble while the bridesmaid's gown was rose pink and her bouquet, turquoise chrysanthemums. Both had culture pearl drop necklaces, gifts of the bride.

Four-year-old Janet Lennox made a charming flower girl in a rose pink chiffon dress, perked with white lace. Her bonnet was of white flowers and net and she carried a basket of pink and white chrysanthemums. Jewelry was a tiny pink heart locket, gift of the bride. Another four-year-old, the bride's cousin, Tom Ellis, was ring bearer, carrying the two rings on a white satin pillow.

Warren Sanderson was best man and ushering guests were Wieber Baanstra, Doug Ross and Richard Slater.

William Parker proposed the toast to his granddaughter at the reception which followed in the War Amputations Hall. The bride's table was decorated with pink roses and silver candelabra and centred with a three-tier wedding cake. The room's decor was pink, white and turquoise streamers, accented with white wedding bells.

Leaving on a honeymoon trip to the mainland and Washington, the bride donned a three-piece jade wool suit with black fur trim, black velvet hat, toning paint accessories and a corsage of red Sweetheart roses. On return, the newlyweds will make their home at 2072 Cadboro Bay Road.

Intellectually Gifted Children Start Talking Early in Life

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Many parents secretly harbor the belief that their child is gifted. Even if Johnny brings home an average report card, they can always fall back on the theory that he's simply bored by classroom routine.

The theory itself is legitimate after all. Winston Churchill wasn't much as a student but it has to be supported by other evidence before the "gifted" verdict is accepted.

A pamphlet written by experts at the mental health division of the federal health department gives ideas on how to identify and help the exceptionally bright youngster.

The intellectually gifted infant starts talking early in life and never lets up. If he says "Mamma" or "Daddy" before he's a year old and talks in sentences before he is two, chances are he's bright.

By age five, or even before, some bright children have taught themselves to read. They are extremely curious, ask hundreds of questions and usually remember the answers.

There are also children whose gifts are in artistic and other fields. Lots of children like playing with piano or paints but the truly talented child becomes immersed in his artistic interests and shows seemingly inexhaustible energy and drive. He probably has a lot of original ideas, perseverance and remarkable powers of concentration.

It's not true that intelligent or creative children are bookworms, physically weak or unsocial. A California study of 1,500 gifted children showed that bright youngsters tend to be superior in size, strength, muscle control and general health.

By 10, the children involved in the study became interested in science, dictionaries, biographies and scientific books. They read more comics than their average friends but gave them up at an earlier age.

The bright child also needs the opportunity in school and outside to satisfy his creative instincts. Nursery school is a good idea but often expensive. This may be overcome by organizing a co-operative neighborhood play school. And even without a formal school, the child can be provided with inexpensive crayons, water paints, paper and paste.

Soon he will be ready for trips to the library, museums, fire and police stations, historical sites and airports. Most gifted children have at least one hobby: ballet or stamp collecting. They can be wearying, maddening and some have three or four at the same time. These interests should be developed through and teachers to encourage the clubs such as Cub Scouts or Brownies, child's endless questions though talents.

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

Fashion shows seem to be always with us. One after the other. There is a certain sameness about them all, sort of a set pattern even if the styles and models are not the same. Not so the other night out at the University of Victoria.

A group at the University, the girl residents, put on a show that was different. Just the youth of it, alone.

The girls themselves modelled the clothes that they would wear around the campus and to the parties that this young set attend. Woodwards, supplied the clothes and Jean Fraser of that firm had coached the girls on how to walk, etc. The girls gave her a lovely bouquet of carnations at the end of the show.

Not only were the participants young, the audience was mostly students. Supporting their fellow students in their charitable effort.

For the whole proceeds of $130 went to the Colonist 500 Fund which officially opens next week. As the admission was only 50 cents it shows the strength of support the girls got.

As well as bringing cheer to the unfortunate at Christmas the girls gave a lot of pleasure while earning their gift money.

Evening gowns, the last to be shown, brought forth much laughter from the crowd and even among the models themselves.

The glamorous wigs were the reason for the merriment. Janice Hall was ready for any emergency as she commented on the show.

This show was swift-moving and even during intermission there was top entertainment including folk singing. A versatile musician, Beth Boyd gave a violin solo which was encores enthusiastically and she and Carol Knight also sang duets accompanying themselves on the guitar.

Diary Hicks was another soloist and others taking part were Hilary Johnston, Sue Humphries, Mary Huckford, Caroline Joffe, Coral Ralph, Linda Williams, Endora Bodo, Elizabeth Tait, and Cairine Ash.

Models were Cheryl Winters, Judy Landro, Pat Rogers, Sue Clayton, Coral Lee Weeks, Barbara Kerone, Mary Ann, Pat Thompson, Linda Neil, Diane English, Mimi Graham, Shirley Giggrey, Marisa MacCauley, Brenda Pitcher, Janis McConnell, Georgia Capeland, Carol McIntyre, and Jackie Mason.

After the show, I would have liked to have lingered to listen to the group who had gathered in the SUB lobby to sing folk blues to strumming guitars.

Anyway, the Colonist appreciates the generous contribution to help make Christmas brighter for those who would not otherwise have much reason to feel festive or mark the day.

Newlyweds to Make Home in Vancouver

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Douglas MacKenzie will make their home in Vancouver on return from a honeymoon spent in California. They were married recently in St. Andrew's Cathedral.

Father A. Kennedy officiated at the double-ring ceremony for the former Susan Lynn Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gilhooly, 639 Ridgebank Crescent, and the son of Mrs. Florence E. Bennett, Springfield, N.S., and the late Mr. Michael Bennett.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, chose a floor-length gown in traditional white with crocheted lace bodice. A sweeping floor-length train added back interest to the A-line skirt. Her two-tiered veil of net, trimmed with lace, fell to her shoulders and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations. Following the ceremony the bride divided her bouquet and sent part of it to the groom's mother.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Gary Fairhurst, and bridesmaids, Misses Coleen Lambert and Jo-Anne Smith, were gowned alike in rose pink A-line dresses featuring white velvet bows attached to the empire waistlines. The matron of honor carried a bouquet of white feathered carnations and green ivy and the bridesmaids carried bouquets of pink feathered carnations to match their dresses.

Mrs. Gary Fairhurst was best man. Ushering were Mr. Dennis Brady, Verona, Ont., Mr. Howard Kettle, Port Aux-Bas, Nfld.

Pink and white theme of the wedding was carried out in the decor at Holyrood House for the reception. Pink roses decorated the white cake centering the bride's table. Mr. Al Smith proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling, the bride chose a three-piece Italian knit ensemble in pink and a matching hat. Her accessories were black patent.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. Pat Holiday, Miss Nancy Briggs, Mr. Ian White, all of Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Corbin, Comox.

Mrs. Robert Swales, Past Grand Matron of B.C., will open the affair. Mrs. George Davies, Worthing Matron, will greet the guests. Mrs. John Finniger is general convener, and Mrs. William Eastwood will look after the tea.

Bazaar Saturday

Esquimalt Chapter No. 41, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold a fall bazaar and tea on Saturday, Nov. 19 from 2 to 4:30 p.m. in the K of P Hall.

Mrs. Robert Swales, Past Grand Matron of B.C., will open the affair. Mrs. George Davies, Worthing Matron, will greet the guests. Mrs. John Finniger is general convener, and Mrs. William Eastwood will look after the tea.

A Diamond Wedding

The Chinese community will be out in force to honor an elderly Chinese couple on Sunday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gan who have lived here since 1912 are celebrating their 50th (diamond) wedding anniversary on that day.

First there will be a reception for their relatives at home, 3630 Kathleen Street from 11 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon.

Later at 6 in the evening a reception for 500 guests will be held in the Don Moo, Sun Lock and Foo Hong restaurants.

Mrs. Gan will wear a two piece Chinese dress of pure silk, black with gold embroidery symbols of long life, happiness and good health. And she'll have an orchid corsage.

Lee Gan, a native of Sun Wai, Kwang Tung, China was born in 1888 and he married Mrs. Yuen in 1906. Of this marriage there were three children, sons Kwon Lee and David Lee who live in Victoria and daughter, Mrs. Jean Chan in China. There are 13 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

The Party Round

A wedding in Shaughnessy Heights United Church later this month, Thursday the 24th has as much interest in Victoria as it has in the Mainland city.

Carolyn Louisa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon E. Verley of Vancouver and Deep Cove, Sidney, and Mr. John Victor Russell, son of Dr. and Mrs. John McGregor Wark of Vancouver will be married on that evening at 8 o'clock.

The bridal attendants will be Miss Susan Whittington, maid of honor, Carolyn's cousin, Mrs. Geoffrey Eyles, bridesmaid and the groom's sister, Miss Mary Lou Wark, bridesmaid.

Last weekend Miss Verley was in Victoria and there was hardly a moment between parties.

A ten and miscellaneous gift shower was held in her home at the home of Mrs. Ken Davis in her Norfolk Road home on Friday.

It was a luncheon and shower that Mrs. E. R. Whittington and daughter

Susan gave at the Union Club on Saturday for her. Covers were laid for 20.

At the tea hour Miss Verley received cup and saucer gifts when Mrs. E. J. Moore entertained.

The bride to be was given an electric tray at the luncheon Mrs. Williams Newcombe gave for her on Sunday at the Victoria Golf Club.

A family dinner for the young couple on Sunday evening at the Ripon Road home of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. E. Manning wound up the week-end parties.

Velvet Covers

It's always a surprise when you find something quite different at one of the many bazaars held before Christmas in Victoria.

Yesterday was the 75th anniversary coffee party and sale at the YM-YW and there were certainly quite a few novel items. Like velvet and corduroy bridge table covers, trimmed with fringe. The Christmas candles were very colorful and the gold sprayed items for Christmas decoration even included a gilded kitchen grater.

The article that particularly interested me was a gay wood carrier. I bought one for beach combing. Striped denim runner has attractive wooden handles at both ends that enable you to carry quite a few pieces of wood with one hand. If you have trouble visualizing that from my description just use your imagination.

Mrs. P. G. Meredith, president of the Auxiliary was there to greet the patrons. Mrs. H. Past, convener, and Mrs. E. B. Hutchison, co-convener, were highly pleased at the results, $750 to enrich the coffers of the Y.

Others in charge were Mrs. G. Walton, Mrs. H. Johnston, Mrs. G. Lott, Mrs. A. Macfarlane, Mrs. John Wallace and Mrs. K. Gowan.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl 16 years old and a junior in high school. I have one date a week, usually on Saturday night. Sometimes I go out on Friday night, too, if there is something special going on.

My mother has decided that I must fill out a date-form. She wants me to answer about twenty questions. Here are some examples:

1. Name of your date, his age, and his address.
2. Occupation of his father.
3. Where did you go?
4. How much money did he spend?
5. Did he try to kiss you?
6. Did you let him?
7. Do you think he will ever amount to anything?

8. Would you like your children to look like him?

I think these questions are dumb. Furthermore I resent the whole thing. Will you please tell me if I am a rebellious and headstrong teenager, as my mother says, or do I have a right to be buggered? — IN-SULTED

Dear Ann Landers: Your mother should know the name of every fellow you date because you should have introduced each one. She also should know where you are going for the evening. But the other questions, particularly number eight, are indeed dumb and I don't blame you for being resentful. Your mother should stop playing twenty questions and display more confidence in your judgment.

Dear Ann Landers: I am burned up about that asinine letter to Dottie the girl who was engaged at 18. Her dear friend who married at 18 wrote to warn her of the dangers of being a teen-age bride.

From the looks of your picture in the paper you can't be more than 40 years old and I happen to know you are a grandmother. So — how old were you when you were married? Ann Landers? And how old was your daughter? Some people find it very easy to give advice to others but they don't follow it in their own lives.

I am enclosing a self-addressed envelope because I know you will never print this letter and I would like an answer. — MRS. R.D.K.

Dear Mrs. R.D.K.: Thank you for the compliment, but I'm over 40. Would you believe 47? I was married at 21, after 3 1/2 years at Morningstar College. I have since regretted that I didn't stay in college and get my degree. Our daughter was married at 22, after four years at Brandon University.

P.S. You are right. It's easier to give advice than to take it.

Confidential to Loued Up Lou Who Needs Words To Live By: At least you know you are loused up, so all is not hopeless. The best words I can give you at the moment are borrowed from W. J. Boothby. He said, "Most people in trouble are victims of the Mischievous Misses: Miss Understanding, Miss Information, Miss Interpretation, Miss Representation, Miss Conception, and Miss Behavior."

Train Toll At 38

NILOPOLIS, Brazil (AP)—A train loaded with commuters bound for Rio de Janeiro collided head-on with a passenger train before dawn Wednesday and police said 38 were known dead and more than 200 injured.

Police Inspector Josef Crespo said he counted 39 bodies at an improvised morgue near Olinda Station, 38 miles northwest of Rio. He said eight other passengers had died in hospitals after being removed from the twisted wreckage.

THROUGH SIGNAL

Railway officials said the Rio-bound train carrying workers left the suburb of Nova Iguaçu, ran through stop signals and slammed into the train headed for Nova Iguaçu.

The first car of the three-car, commuter train (bound for Rio) ripped open at impact and threw passengers and wreckage across the tracks, witnesses said.

"There was a sharp crash, then a lot of panic," said survivor Ned Barroelios Petreia, a passenger in the third car of the commuter train.

High Eye Brings Rescue

By BOB PETHICK

It's cold, with a stiff freshening westerly breeze blowing, as Phil Giotz approaches Brochile Ledge light in his 22-foot pleasure cruiser.

Phil's throat feels a little dry as he listens to the engine hitting on four cylinders. His problem is the engine has six cylinders.

Then it happens — the engine quits, and bobbing around in the freshening wind, Phil begins to feel vulnerable, unloved.

Up on the 10th floor of a Dallas Road high-rise apartment sits a retired gentleman who rented the place because he likes looking at the sea. He is studying a freighter that has rounded William Head and is heading for Victoria.

On a second sweep with his glasses he notices a cabin cruiser lying dead in the trough of the waves. The man has watched boats fishing off Brochile Ledge before and knows even if they are fishing they keep under way.

Something is wrong. He remembers looking at the emergency numbers in first page of the telephone directory. In small print it explained that to get help you dial operator and announce marine distress.

Now things start happening. The call is immediately switched to Rescue Co-Ordination Centre in Vancouver where the on-duty control officer asks for a precise location, jotting down the information as the caller speaks.

Next the pilot station will be alerted and a general call transmitted to all vessels in the area through Victoria Marine Radio.

The man would have achieved the same results by phoning the city or municipal police or the RCMP.

It turns out that the nearest available boat is a pilot vessel which is dispatched in haste to take the 22-foot cruiser in tow. Phil heaves a mighty sigh of relief.

Coast Guard Rescue Officer Capt. J. C. Barbour said Tuesday there are more than 100 volunteer "rescue agents" on the B.C. Coast and the RCAF, who operate the coordination centre in co-operation with the Coast Guard, has more than 300 names listed to be called for information on distressed ships in their areas.

"Once we get information on a distressed vessel's position we can take immediate action," he said. "A call to your area police force or direct to Vancouver will start things moving."

Phil Giotz in his 22-foot cabin cruiser probably never knew he had been the centre of attention for all these people. He was just glad to get a line on the wharf and forget it.

Two Park Contracts Awarded

A $64,400 contract for construction of a change and dressing room and service building for Topaz Park was won Wednesday by H. E. Fowler and Sons Ltd.

Members of city council parks committee were told by City Manager Dennis Young another $165,000 would be required to buy additional land for the park but the project was a capital budget enterprise and there would be enough money to cover costs.

Also won by the Fowler company was a contract to erect a small parks service building at Beacon Hill Park. The tender was for $13,340.

CEMETERY GUARD

A letter was received from the B.C. Historical Association asking the city provide adequate protection for Ross Bay Cemetery to prevent recurrence of vandalism in which grave-stones were knocked over and defaced and extensive damage done to the grounds.

The association will be told a survey is in progress on ways to prevent cemetery damage and a report is expected soon.

Permission was given the 100-gun salute from Clover B.C. Centennial Armed Services Point during festivities July 1, Liaison Subcommittee to fire a 1967.

crisp & juicy B.C. Red Spartans

Kissin' cousins to the famous B.C. McIntosh Reds.

Perhaps only once in a lifetime a NEW apple appears that captures the fancy of old and young alike!

The B.C. Red Spartan has been developed in British Columbia's sunny Okanagan Valley, by crossing the famous McIntosh and Newtown apples... and Nature has blessed it with the best qualities of both.

The flavor of the Spartan is distinctive and sweet, and yet reminiscent of the McIntosh... the flesh is an appetizing clear white... and the core is unusually small. The Spartan is a superb all-purpose apple, rich and juicy for fresh eating... tempting and flavorful in your favorite desserts.

Western's Project Shows Successful Mine Gamble

By TOM CARNEY
SECOND OF SERIES

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP)—Western Mining Ltd. is an impressive example of how—despite awesome odds against success—a fortunate few make it in the booming British Columbia mining industry.

Six years ago, Western constituted some rotting buildings at an abandoned mine between Nelson and Kaslo, with little but a set of dusty records of past glories and even remoter dividends.

Today, a new property and $15,000,000 later, it stands for hundreds of jobs for construction workers, loggers and miners preparing a mine, mill and township where Myra Creek flows into Buttle Lake 55 miles from here in the centre of Vancouver Island.

And in the future, it represents a place to work and live for the 1,000 persons who will inhabit the town under construction.

On the other end of the scale, Western is almost an obscenity to a group of conservationists, shocked at the provincial government's precedent-setting decision giving the company permission to develop a mine in the vast, beautiful and publicly-owned Strathcona Park.

Six years ago Harold Wright, Western's president and a Vancouver engineering executive, negotiated the purchase of 23 claims along Myra Creek where prospectors started claim staking in the 1920s. The company optioned 25 additional claims and staked 128 itself.

From there it will start production this month on an ore body known to have at least 2,000,000 tons of ore averaging .06 ounces of gold and 2.5 ounces silver a ton and 2.2 per cent copper, 1.1 per cent lead and 10 per cent zinc, which combine for a gross value of $100,000,000.

Concentrate production for the first four years at a rate of 200 tons a day has already been sold for shipment to smelters in Europe, Great Britain, the United States and Japan.

Western's Vancouver Island project is one of many gambles in the B.C. mining industry and one of the few that is paying off. To enter into the game, the company raised and put up $4,500,000 for initial exploration and early development.

On another gamble—backed by scientific tests and the latest in skills and knowledge, but still a gamble—the company executive decided to put this $4,500,000 into developing just one of its three groups of claims in the area.

This summer Western completed its mine, with four miles of underground tunnel drilled, and where the ore was close to the surface an open-pit operation under way. Before construction of the mill was complete, more than $1,000,000 worth of ore was piled up, waiting for the copper, zinc and lead to be turned into concentrate. The silver and gold will be extracted at the smelters.

Western had to do much more than simply raise the money and start construction of a mine and mill.

In the isolated Myra Creek area, there was no electricity.

Crashes Hurt Four

Four people received minor injuries in Victoria and district accidents Tuesday night and early Wednesday.

Colwood RCMP said Virginia Denton of 282 Meade and Barry Warburton of HMCS St. Croix were drivers of vehicles in collision on the Trans-Canada Highway near Talbot Road at 2:15 a.m. Both drivers were treated in hospital for scalp injuries.

WHIPLASH INJURIES
James McAree of 227 Forshaw was the driver of a car struck in the rear by a car driven by David Davidson of 2161 Fair at 8:42 p.m. Tuesday at Wharf and Johnson. Mr. McAree was treated for whiplash injuries.

A vehicle driven by Georges Guy Glass of 3351 Quadra was involved in a single car accident at Tattersall and Saanich Road at 11:58 p.m. Tuesday. Passenger Raymond Lacombe of 3486 Lovatt was taken to St. Joseph's with superficial cuts and released. Mr. Glass was held for observation.

A helicopter flew men and equipment to a lake 2,200 feet above the mine. The crew drilled a 350-foot tunnel under the lake bottom, tapping the natural reservoir. Then the men laid a 24-inch pipeline down the slope of Mount Myra to a generating station.

To get the ore out, Western had to have bulk, at a cost of $2,000,000, a 22-mile road linking with island highways and terminating at the company's wharf in Campbell River. The road was one of the last projects to be completed.

All the construction equipment and men had to be transported 20 miles up Buttle Lake in a strange armada.

The men came—and returned for days off—on yachts or seaplanes. Trucks were brought up the lake on a landing craft. Cedar-log rafts, 125 feet by 65 feet, capable of carrying 80 tons and pulled by a 165-horsepower tugboat, were used to bring up other equipment.

One of the first pieces of equipment brought in was a sawmill, since transportation costs ruled out importing basic building materials in the early stages.

The mine is attractive in appearance. Stained or oiled cedar siding—born from the sawmill—and sheet metal panels with colored finishes cover the buildings. A landscape architect was flown in for consultation. Some of the flowers and lawns are already planted. And this is the mine—not the townsite.

Charles M. Campbell Jr., general manager, admits the nice appearance cost a little more.

"But the pride the employees have in this setup will be an important aspect of our efficiency." And the cost of the extras "is not significant over the over-all capital expenditure."

Government Leads In Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — The government's National Renovation Alliance party appeared on the way Wednesday night to control of the Brazilian senate and chamber of deputies in first official returns from Tuesday's nationwide congressional elections. About five per cent of the estimated 17,000,000 votes were tabulated at the close of the first day of counting. Final results are not expected for several days.

Meteors

World Skies Blaze

NEW YORK (UPI) — The northern hemisphere witnessed the celestial show of the century Wednesday when the earth passed through the Leonid meteor shower under the most auspicious conditions since 1833.

Star gazers in Japan and the Kamohaka Peninsula were the first to witness the spectacular display of "falling stars" radiating from a point near the constellation Leo, but astronomers said the show was at its diamond brightest over Europe.

FINE DEBRIS

The meteoroids were, astronomers said, fine debris from the comet Tempel-Tuttle, first identified in 1889. The Leonid shower is annual but was especially spectacular in 1799, 1833 and 1866, leading astronomers to believe it had an intensity cycle of about 33 years.

However, the Leonids have put on disappointing shows since 1866, perhaps because they were drawn from the earth's path by the gravitational pull of some larger planet.

CLOSE SCRAPES

The Tempel-Tuttle comet now has returned to its 1833 position, so its debris is expected to return to extra-brilliant visibility this year.

Comet debris is believed to have been torn loose from the parent celestial body by close encounter with the gravity of the sun or a planet. The earth experiences 17 annual meteor showers, but they are only a fraction as spectacular as the Leonids at their best.

French Fuss Probable

PARIS (AFP) — The French cabinet Wednesday decided on a new electoral law likely to unleash a howl of protest from the country's opposition parties on the ground it favors the Gaullists.

Under the law, only candidates who win backing from 10 per cent of the electorate in the first ballot will be able to stand in the second.

The effect of the law, to be applied in next March's general elections, will be to increase the number of straight fights between the Gaullist majority and the opposition.

ONLY THREE

If the law had been applied in 1962 general elections, it would have eliminated about 60 opposition candidates and only three Gaullists.

Some observers said the only way the new law might help the opposition would be to spur it to joint action.

At present, the opposition is split between the Communists, the non-Communist left led by Francois Mitterrand and the Democratic Centre led by Jean Lecanuet.

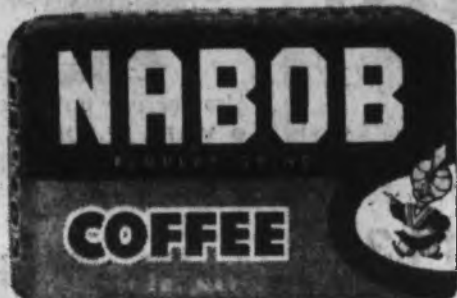

Joint action now is held up because of disagreement over whether or not to team up with the Communists.

High Rental Irks Bonn

PARIS (UPI) — Thrift-conscious West Germany balked Wednesday at a $2,000,000 yearly rental demand and delayed a decision on a new home for the NATO permanent council. Informed sources said the rental was demanded by owners of the new building in Brussels that the permanent council has been considering since it decided to abandon Paris — the Namur Gate building at Ixelles. The council decided to meet again Monday.

'Two Riflemen'

Penn Jones, Texas newspaperman and student of the Kennedy assassination, said in Victoria Wednesday that he is "firmly convinced that there were at least two riflemen" involved in the slaying.

He expanded an earlier statement that 10 people close to the Kennedy and Lee Oswald killings have died under odd circumstances.

He said that since the president's death, 18 people have died who "had knowledge or had the opportunity to have special knowledge of the events of that day."

Mr. Jones, one of the foremost American critics of the Warren Commission which investigated the 1963 assassination, spoke in S.J. Willis junior high school auditorium before an audience of about 400.

DETAILS REPEATED

If repeated details of a story he published recently in Ramparts magazine, and he told of witnesses who saw one or more men with rifles by a fence near the shooting scene.

"I'm one of those people who doesn't believe Oswald killed anyone," he said. "I don't think he was innocent but I don't think he killed anybody."

"Too many important witnesses were not called before the Warren commission."

He said the commission "mutilated evidence" because it was in a hurry.

The commissioners "wandered in and out of the hearings like it was a cattle auction."

Dr. Kelsey's Husband Dead at 54 in U.S.

Dr. F. Ellis Kelsey, special assistant to the surgeon-general of the U.S. public health service, died Wednesday in Washington, D.C. of a heart attack at the age of 54. He was the husband of Dr. Frances O. Kelsey of Cobble Hill, who won the U.S. Distinguished Service Medal for keeping the infant-forming drug thalidomide off the market.

Dr. Kelsey and his wife came to Vancouver Island each summer until the death of her father, Col. Frank Trevor Oldham, in 1961. Dr. Frances Kelsey met her husband when she was a lecturer with the University of South Dakota's school of medicine.

The late Dr. Kelsey was an advocate of the creation of drug information clearing houses to provide scientists and physicians with immediate medical information and help them control use of potentially dangerous drugs.

From 1940 to 1951 he was on the faculty of the department of pharmacology at the University of Chicago, and later became chairman of physiology and pharmacology at the University of South Dakota school of medicine.

In 1960, Dr. Kelsey joined the division of general medical sciences of the U.S. National Institutes of Health as a program analyst and then as the executive secretary of the special training grants program.

Surviving in addition to his wife are two daughters, Susan, 19, at McGill University, and Christine, 17, a student at the National Cathedral School for Girls, Washington.

Art Gallery Sale Today

Driver Fined $500

A naval petty officer was fined $500 Wednesday in Supreme Court on two charges arising from the traffic death in April of Daniel George of Victoria.

Brian Dale McMillan of CFB Esquimalt was fined $300 for dangerous driving, $200 for impaired driving, and his licence to drive was suspended for 18 months by Mr. Justice J. A. Macdonald, following a jury verdict of guilty, returned Tuesday.

Mr. Justice Macdonald said he did not think the public interest required a jail term.

Langford, Glen Lake, Colwood and Metchosin elementary schools will be the pools for Saturday's centennial swimming pool referendum.

A $200,000 Olympic-size swimming pool on 18½ acres of defence department property at Colwood is the joint centennial project for the Langford, Colwood, Happy Valley, Glen Lake and Metchosin areas.

Raw B.C. history goes on view at the University of Victoria library today.

The exhibit of documents, letters, journals and photos from B.C.'s infancy will be on display on the ground floor of the McPherson library until the end of the month.

Orange harbingers of Christmas are on their way to Victoria travelling at 19 knots. The Saruga Maru out of Shimizu, Japan is due here at 5 p.m. with 25,000 cases of mandarin oranges.

Education Minister Peterson has refused to give any extra money for Victoria's new Institute of Adult Studies. In a letter to Victoria city clerk Morran Waller Mr. Peterson made no commitment on a request by the inter-municipal committee for money to help establish the school.

Eye-Stoppers

Clay Craftsmen Put on Pedestal

By JERRY BOULTBEE

Victoria's potters — and those who simply like pots — have paid nothing but the highest tribute to three area craftsmen — Jan and Helga Grove, both living in Victoria, and George Cummings, a Victorian living now in Portland, Ore.

An exhibition of their work is on display at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria until Dec. 4.

Mr. Grove is pottery instructor at the University of Victoria. His wife is an accomplished potter herself.

TURKISH MADE

A small segment of the work displayed was made by the pair while living in recent years in Turkey.

The work displayed exudes a Near Eastern aura.

The pottery of Germanic Europe has a distinctive style, as does contemporary North American pottery.

When one rolls the influence of all three distinctive styles into one — as the Groves have done — the result is an eye stopper.

The Groves' early training in the craft was in Germany. Later they moved to Istanbul, where Mr. Grove was head of the Fine Arts School, and now they have established their pottery on Sooke Road in Colwood.

COBALT BLUE

Particularly pleasing were a whole range of deep cobalt blue pots and jars — glazes which were made up by the potters themselves.

A variety of smaller pots — made while the Groves were living in Turkey — are given ornate design through the use of engobe (slip) dipping, etching and glazing.

MUCH SMALLER

Mr. Cummings' work, in an adjoining gallery, is much smaller in size than most of that of the Groves.

Some of his best pieces are his hand-carved bottles — slab-work with intricate contemporary designs.

All three potters have been well recognized for their skill.

INTERNATIONAL SHOW

Not only have several of the pieces already been sold, but the Groves have only recently heard word of acceptance of two of their pieces for international exhibition by the department of external affairs. In addition, one piece will be shown at the Expo '67 craft show.

Mr. Cummings is an instructor at the Art Museum of Portland, and some of his work will also be shown at Expo '67. Mr. Cummings studied his craft in England and Switzerland.

Garden Notes

On the Shady Side

By M. V. CHESNUT

A garden plot shaded by trees or buildings presents quite a few problems to the home gardener. Few of our brightest and more colorful plants require at least a modicum of sunshine to perform satisfactorily. I have written several times listing and describing flowers which will thrive under shaded woodland conditions; selecting shrubs for such an aspect is a bit more difficult, but there are a few which do surprisingly well in the shaded garden.

One good choice is Pieris floribunda, once listed under the name Andromeda and often nicknamed lily of the valley bush. This is a shapely evergreen shrub of considerable decorative value, and extremely hardy. It has small oval glossy leaves, and its ultimate height is around five feet, which brings it within the scope of even a small garden. The short heads of fragrant white flowers—resembling lily of the valley—are produced abundantly in March and April.

Its cousin, Pieris japonica, is just as pleasing, with somewhat larger glossy foliage, and is an ideal choice in spots where the smoke and fumes from mills and other industrial plants make it difficult to grow other shrubs. Both Pieris revel in a moist soil free from lime, and it is a good idea to incorporate plenty of peat moss or leafmould in the planting site, as for rhododendrons.

Skimmia is a nicely compact evergreen shrub which actually prefers a shaded site. This one, also, has glossy laurel-like leaves which are remarkably resistant to smog and industrial fumes; these leaves have a most pleasing aromatic fragrance when crushed. In spring it bears stiff branchlets of white blossom clusters, and these are followed by brilliant red berries which are often retained well into the winter.

Skimmia japonica, the most commonly planted variety, comes in separate male and female bushes; only the females produce berries, and then only when a male bush is nearby for pollination. I imagine it might be possible to get berries on a lone female by spraying the open blossoms with a tomato-setting hormone spray, as is sometimes done for female hollies. The Skimmias grow to a height of three to five feet, with about the same spread.

Nearly all the members of the barberry family do well under woodland conditions, and two of them are special favorites of mine: berberis darwinii and mahonia aquifolium. Darwin's barberry, if unrestrained, will grow to a height of eight feet but can be held at almost any size you like by pruning lightly and annually. It has glossy dark green leaves rather like holly, and the clusters of orange flowers are borne profusely in May, followed by purple berries which make a delicious jelly.

Mahonia aquifolium makes a shrub three feet tall with a four-foot spread, while its cousin, mahonia japonica beali, is a little larger. Both are commonly known as Oregon grape, with shiny dark green foliage that turns bronze or red in autumn. Yellow blossoms are borne in late winter and early spring, and these have a delicious lily of the valley scent.

All the flowering current bushes do well in shade, and one of them, Ribes alpinum, is about the best hedge plant I know for a shaded location. Ribes aureum has yellow blossoms and is noted for the rich coloring of its autumn foliage, while a fairly new hybrid, Pulborough scabrid, is about the best of the red-flowered kinds.

For a touch of formality in the shaded garden, plant either the green or the golden Irish yew; these give an air of quiet dignity to the surroundings without dominating the scene too much. The yews will do well in almost any kind of soil but they resent a waterlogged position and good drainage. The yews will do well in almost any they will not tolerate soot or industrial fumes.

ART BUCHWALD Interprets the Elections

The Grass Roots Speak

WASHINGTON—This is the time when we must interpret the results of last week's elections. What were the issues that made lifelong Democrats vote Republican and lifelong Republicans vote Democrat?

Was it the Viet Nam war? Was it inflation? Was it the white backlash? Nixon? The draft? In order to find out I went forth and interviewed several voters on why they voted the way they did.

I found a man sitting in a rocking chair on his porch, smoking a cornucop pipe.

"Sir, your neighbors tell me you were a lifelong Democrat and for the first time in this election you voted Republican. Could you tell me what national issue made you change your mind?"

"They wouldn't fix my sewer."

"I beg your pardon?"

"You deaf or something? I said the Democrats wouldn't fix my sewer. I told them a month ago you better send someone out here to fix my sewer or I'm going to vote Republican. They won't come out and fix my sewer soon, I may become an independent."

"Then Viet Nam did not play a part in your switching your vote?"

"Of course it did. I figured they're over there spending all that money giving these people new sewers, the least they could do was repair mine."

"What about the white backlash?" I asked him.

"Heck, I didn't care who fixed the sewer, just as long as they sent out a crew. You live around a broken sewer for a little while and you're ready to throw the incumbents out, no matter who they are."

"Did former Vice-President Nixon influence you in any way?"

"Not much. He might have, if he brought up the sewer issue, but he stayed away from it. I guess he was trying to unite the Republican party."

"Was your fear of inflation a factor in you switching your vote?"

"Well, in a way it was. When I called up to ask them why they wouldn't fix my sewer, they said it cost them twice as much to repair it now as it did 10 years ago. So that got me to thinking. If you can't get your sewer repaired for a decent price there must be inflation in this country."

"Thank you very much, sir. I'm glad you were influenced by the national issues in this election."

I went across the street to another house and spoke to a man who was raking his leaves.

"Mister, is it true that you voted Republican this time after being a registered Democrat?"

"Yes, I did, and I don't mind telling you why. I'm getting sick and tired of big government interfering in your private life."

"How's that?"

"Well, you take that broken sewer out there. You know why it hasn't been fixed? Because everyone is waiting for the government to do it. Now the Republican philosophy, as I understand it, is that everyone should fix his own sewer. That's what made this country great. Our forefathers didn't wait around for someone to repair their sewers for them. They just dug a hole and wrapped some burlap around the broken pipe."

"What about the draft?"

"Oh, you get a pretty good draft from that sewer if the wind's blowing in your direction."

To round up my survey, I decided to interview a defeated incumbent who lived four blocks away.

"Sir, why do you think you lost the election?"

"I think it was displeasure with the Great Society, Bobby Kennedy's failure to campaign for me, and lack of money for a television campaign."

"What political office did you hold?"

Beatles Out, Bond Next

NEW YORK (NANA)—The B's are on their way out, and I do mean the Beatles and the Bonds. The shaggy quartet has already broken up. And with Sean Connery now completing his last 007 and everyone except the widow of creator Ian Fleming rich as all get out from the series, a chap at United Artists in London informed me, "You Only Live Twice will wrap them up."

Still they come—books and films on the Kennedy assassination. The Silence of Lee Harvey Oswald opens on the West End stage in London next month, with Sarah Miles as Oswald's widow. . . Ursula Andress has turned photographer. She's been doing some magazine layouts of Jean-Paul Belmondo—naturally.

Anita Ekberg is busting out big in movies again. Vittorio de Sica lashed her for a role with Shirley MacLaine in Woman Times Seven. You can also view Anita in Jerry Lewis' Way . . . Way Out. And American International has signed her for The Glass Sphinx. . . Irene Pappas, playing her third widow in Each To Herself, plans to follow Greek compatriot Melina Mercouri to Broadway.

Jerry Epstein, who was Charles Chaplin's assistant throughout the filming of A Countess from Hong Kong, will do some producing of his own—"I will make The Ugly Duckling," he told me before I left London.

Shirley Jones and Jack Cassidy, Mr. and Mrs. in private life, will play Wait Until Dark for two weeks in New York before they take the thriller on the road, January 17, 1967. Lee Remick on December 27 leaves the role she originated. Five days later Audrey Hepburn starts the film, with Terence Young directing. I saw Flossie Blackman in the role of the blind girl who outwits her would-be-murders, in London. I can't imagine anyone being better.

Twenty-one-year-old Jeannette Pettit was one of the crowd in The Group, in her second movie, Night of the Generals. She will receive equal billing with Peter O'Toole and Omar Sharif.

Tourists Unseeing

ROSENBERG

Many of us travel through life, as we travel through strange and interesting countries—clicking away at what we see in order to get a picture. But, truth to tell, we are often so busy scurrying from place to place, that we rarely do get to know or to understand what we are seeing. We are careful, though, to take the picture.

The average western traveller seems more interested in visiting buildings, or viewing landscapes than in understanding people. He rarely takes the time to meet the folks of the lands he visits—save for those who collect around hotel lobbies or dining room tables.

He is too busy clicking away—taking pictures of bridges, museums, gardens or obelisks. After two or three days of this, however, he cheerfully moves on to another country.

Upon his return home, having encountered little more than bricks, mortar or greenery, he becomes an expert on foreign policy, trade and tariff, nuclear testing and economic aid. Unfortunately, the North American remains one of the most provincial humans to be found anywhere in the civilized world.

He generally speaks but one language—his own. (If he once studied a smattering of high school French he is simply amazed that a three-year-old French child can speak that language better than he!)

He is sadly deficient in the knowledge of the history of any other people but his own. He has small, even aggravating ideas, about geography.

It has been said that travel broadens and that visits to other lands sharpen our perspective. True. Often what seems so important is discarded or reduced in size when we learn to view it from afar.

The average tourist, however, is at a great disadvantage—despite the fact that he has removed from home physically, he takes with him a whole bag of narrow prejudices—prejudices which blind him from seeing what is truly before him. Thus, when he does not receive deferential or adoring treatment at the hands of the "natives," he vows that he will petition his government to refuse future foreign aid to these "ungrateful people."

When he is not served with speed and alacrity and hears no clinking of heels in his presence, he will often generalize: "Well, what can you expect from the French; they are a lazy lot and like to spend their time doing nothing."

He may be visiting France, yet it is quite clear that he has never left home. Besides huge trunks of unnecessary clothing and assorted bags containing camera equipment, he often brings very little else with him. At bottom, two human and sympathetic qualities of character are lacking in such the throbbing people: patience and imagination. The North American is too often an impatient, unimaginative creature. If he does not see immediate results or gain rapid pleasure he is often uninterested in what is before him.

Lacking patience he often lacks imagination. Much that is good in life can only be enjoyed and experienced, slowly and temperately.

The Frenchman does not guzzle his wine, but savors its taste to the very last drop. He is wiser than the American who downs a Coca-Cola in two seconds flat—straight out of the bottle!

There is a lesson here not only for tourists but also for the man who stays at home. In every day's habit or thought we have the patience and the imagination to see between the lines of life or are our noses stuck so closely to the print that we miss the real, the vital and the throbbing!

John D thumbs through wires of support

Convention Ordered

TORIES PHASE-OUT CHIEF

By RON COLLISTER, Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Conservative meeting Wednesday dumped John Diefenbaker and gave him another one-year term to hide the fatal wound.

Today, the Tory leader still refuses to be dumped, but the course is set to early retirement.

With the likelihood of a leadership convention before the end of next year, his traditional caucus support is sure to break up as some of its key members start their own campaigns for the top job.

Already, his ordeal at the hands of the meeting has affected his ability to function in the Commons, where his stature has been undermined by the actions of the delegates.

Wednesday, for the first time in 26 years, he called at his Parliament Hill office but couldn't face parliament.

The Conservative leader will consider his future over the weekend. He is unlikely to retire immediately, but will indicate his plans soon.

If he agrees to the wishes of the delegates and stays as leader until a leadership convention probably next fall, he will be in a powerful position to influence the choice of a successor.

Worst Beatings Over

This fact alone guarantees leadership convention and he would discuss it with the executive and other people.

John Diefenbaker was on a losing streak from the moment the leadership showdown began.

First, the delegates voted overwhelmingly for a secret ballot on all leadership votes.

Then came three leadership votes:

● Two virtually identical motions calling for leadership convention plus an expression of support for Mr. Diefenbaker were approved by 548 to 209, and 563 to 186.

● The count on a third vote, on confidence in Mr. Diefenbaker, was not revealed. E. A. Goodman, Q.C., of Toronto, chairman of the resolutions committee, said he had burned the ballot papers before they were counted.

While Mr. Diefenbaker was given a vote of support, it was a hollow success.

The word "confidence," traditional in resolutions of support for the leader, was missing, and the word "support" was used.

It will never be known how

'Hitler Youth' Feels Maritime Muscle

OTTAWA (Special) — How high did feelings run, how hot blood boil?

Among the Maritimers, with violence.

"There goes the old S.O.B.," said a student Conservative who later identified himself as a Camp follower, or as the Diefenbaker loyalists call them "Hitler Youth."

The "old S.O.B." was Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker as he left the Chateau and his inner guard of 200 cheering and still wildly loyal followers after crying "Fight on, my men."

And the student who had called him that was flat on the floor the next moment.

Nursing a skinned knuckle where it had connected with the student's chin was Robert Mair, Conservative MP for Cape Breton North and Victoria.

"Sure I slapped the young punk," he said. "He can't call The Chief that."

Another whose muscle impressed another of Dalton Camp's "Hitler Youth" was Donald MacLennan, Conservative MP for Cape Breton South. He had gone to the voting desk to get his ballot and he was wearing an Arthur Maloney button.

"Who're you?" asked the student. "Show me your credentials."

"I'm show you," shouted MacLennan, the fighting ex-convict minor from Cape Breton. "Here, look," and he waved a fistful of scarred knuckles under the student's startled nose.

He got the ballot without further argument.

Sheppard hugs second wife, Ariane

Sheppard Freed

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Samuel H. Sheppard was found innocent Wednesday night of killing his pregnant wife, Marilyn, in her bedroom 12 years ago.

The jury of seven men and five women took nearly 12 hours to acquit the 42-year-old former o.s.t.e.p.h. of second-degree murder in the retrial he won last June from the U.S. Supreme Court.

Sheppard served nine years in prison after another jury — in a courtroom just four steps across the hall from where the retrial was held — convicted him of second-degree murder Dec. 21, 1954.

The defendant did not take the stand in his retrial where 31 witnesses testified, compared with 70 at the nine-week first trial when the jury deliberated five days. At the first trial the charge was first degree murder, and the state asked the death penalty.

The retrial jury got the case from Common Pleas Judge Francis J. Talty at 10:30 a.m. today and returned its verdict at 10:15 p.m.

Reporters gathered around Sheppard and asked him to make a statement. He pointed to defence counsel F. Lee Bailey and said: "That's my man."

"Tell them anything you want, Sam," said Bailey.

Marilyn Sheppard died with more than 25 bone-deep blows to the head on a Sunday morning in the upstairs bedroom of her suburban Bay Village home.

The state said Sheppard killed Marilyn during a quarrel over his attentions to Susan Hayes, then a young, attractive medical technician at Bay View hospital.

Sheppard, who since has lost his medical licence, served there as a neurosurgeon.

Sheppard has contended that the crime was committed by an intruder, who knocked him unconscious after beating Marilyn to death.

Hot Wires Warm Weary Warrior

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "The party caucus, not the party organization determines the party leadership in Parliament."

This was John Diefenbaker answering the question as it was put to him: "Do you intend remaining as leader of the official opposition no matter what?"

Then he went on to recall how Sir Winston Churchill had served nearly three years as prime minister before the Conservative party organization confirmed him as party leader.

The party caucus is supreme, he insisted, "and that is that."

He was saying these things in an interview with initially three and then five newspapermen, four hours after he had marched into the lobby of the Chateau Laurier and told 300 wildly cheering supporters: "Fight on, my men."

But where at the Chateau, he had quoted the Elizabethan warrior knight, Sir John Barton, "The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

Then, with relish, after a brief pause he continued: "When the wicked, even mine

then I'll fight again," it was the 27th Psalm.

A telegram had come in, one of several hundred, this particular wire from Toronto, with the message: "See Psalm 27."

So he reached into the book-shelf near his Centre Block office desk, and read:

"The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?"

"The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

Money Talk Drags On

OTTAWA (CP) — The money supply debate stretched through a 12th straight day in the Commons Wednesday as Liberals and Conservatives clashed over the ramifications of the government's success in finding money when the opposition thought it had none.

The bill to give the government authority to spend $372,000,000 to meet November bills got through second reading and most of clause-by-clause study before it stalled. It had been expected to pass easily after 11 days of opposition attacks on the government's failed off Tuesday.

OPINION SOUGHT

The jam arose after Conservatives requested the public accounts committee to call in Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson for an opinion on the way the government turned up enough money to meet civil service and armed forces payrolls although the money supply bill had not been passed.

Revenue Minister Benoit said he would give consideration to doing this, but couldn't commit himself further than that.

present measures are protecting the state from subversion and also whether they are protecting the rights of individuals.

The other members are M. J. Coldwell, former leader of the CCF party, and Yves Pratte, Quebec city lawyer.

The commission is to advise the government "what security methods and procedures are most effective and how they can best be implemented."

Hearings of the body will be secret.

The order-in-council said the commissioners, in making their study and report, must take all necessary steps to preserve:

● The secrecy of sources of security information in Canada.

● The privacy of individuals involved in specific cases which may be examined.

● The security of information provided to Canada in confidence by other nations.

Mr. Mackenzie, 58, is chairman of the board of Canadian Chemical Company in Montreal. He served as deputy minister of trade and commerce from 1945 to 1951 and was first deputy minister of the department of defence production for a year before returning to private industry.

WIDE INTERESTS

Mr. Mackenzie also is president of Chemcell Ltd., a subsidiary, and a director of a number of Canadian companies. He began his public service in 1939 with the foreign exchange control board and later served with the wartime prices and trade board.

The state said Sheppard killed Marilyn during a quarrel over his attentions to Susan Hayes, then a young, attractive medical technician at Bay View hospital.

Sheppard, who since has lost his medical licence, served there as a neurosurgeon.

Sheppard has contended that the crime was committed by an intruder, who knocked him unconscious after beating Marilyn to death.

Some ferry service across the English Channel and sailings between Liverpool and Ireland were cancelled.

Dozens of other ships were forced to run for shelter as the winds mounted in fury.

The Orkney Islands were cut off both by sea and air.

In The Netherlands, the gales forced suspension of all pilot services and alerted guards along the country's southern coast.

Elsewhere, strong gales over southern England caused widespread damage to buildings, up-set land, sea and air traffic for the second consecutive day and brought danger of flooding.

Then, urgently: "Request lifeboat assistance. May have to evacuate."

Final Term for Fleming

B.C. Boss Fed Up

By JACK FRY
Legislative Reporter

B.C. Progressive Conservative president Stuart Fleming said Wednesday he will not stand for re-election because of his inability to reconcile differences of opinion within the party in B.C.

In addition to giving up the presidency, he said that "under no circumstances" will he consider contesting the provincial leadership.

He said in an interview from his office in Vernon that he notified other Tory officers "some while ago" of his intention not to run for another term.

REPORT DENIED

Mr. Fleming denied earlier reports that he is quitting because Esquimalt-Saanich MP George Chatterton charged that 60 B.C. delegates to the Tory convention in Ottawa were illegally appointed.

"Part of my reason is this—I

Fleming

have been unable to reconcile the differences of opinion and the conflict within the party so far as British Columbia is concerned," Mr. Fleming said.

TVE FAILED

"I had hoped that I might find a middle ground but I haven't. I have completely failed in that."

Mr. Fleming said it would be more desirable to elect a president in the Greater Vancouver area, "where he is more readily available to the headquarters and the day-to-day operations of the party."

He said he hopes a new president can be elected sometime in February or March.

"We cannot go on indefinitely leaving the provincial leadership politically vacant. Now I don't know of anyone specifically who is prepared to make this commitment, but I understand one or more are seriously considering it."

Company Claims Big Effort In Battle Against Pollution

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI—A letter from the Alberni and District Labor Council to the provincial cabinet committee on pollution, and a report by MacMillan Bloedel the same day on its progress in pollution abatement, were termed "purely coincidental" by the spokesmen at a MacMillan Bloedel press conference Tuesday.

"We were unaware that any such action was being taken," said Don Brewster, manager of personnel and administration and Alex Van Allen, recently-appointed manager at Alpu, when told of the labor council's letter, which was released to the press and public Tuesday.

MacMillan Bloedel announced the appointment of a senior chemical engineer, Art Roy, to co-ordinate and work full-time on the pollution abatement program.

Fly ash emission has been taken in three ways, the company reports.

LIFEBOAT

The fly ash collection efficiency has been improved by a complete overhaul of the multi-cyclone cinder collectors on all three hog fuel power boilers, and by improving the efficiency of the Doyle scrubber on No. 1 boiler.

Two more Doyle scrubbers now are being installed on No. 2 and No. 3 power boilers at a cost of $143,000. These will come into operation this winter.

The steam load on the hog fuel boilers has been reduced by installing and operating two oil-fired boilers. Installation cost was $385,000. This has reduced hog fuel consumption and lowered fly ash emission. Added fuel oil cost this year will be in excess of $120,000.

EVAPORATORS

A further steam reduction will result from the installation of two new black liquor evaporators. This work is now underway and will be completed by year end at a total cost of $215,000.

The company has given high priority to investigating ways of reducing emission to an absolute minimum. Company personnel and equipment manufacturers are continuously engaged in these investigations.

Substantial efforts also are underway on water pollution abatement. A clarifier is being installed to treat effluent from the woodmill. This will cost $165,000 and will be operating in early 1967.

TOO MUCH SALT

Stanley Associates Engineering Ltd. of Vancouver has been engaged by the company as consultants on water pollution. Investigations are continuing to reduce salt cake emission.

Mr. Van Allen confirmed that expenditures over the year will be just over $1,000,000, which the company announced last January would be spent in 1966.

Asked about the efficiency of the Doyle scrubber, he replied he considers the scrubbers effective and capable of doing "a" job, if not "the" job.

CONTINUING JOB

Pollution abatement is a continuing program, Mr. Van Allen said, and it had been emphasized to him as top priority when he took over his new appointment recently.

However, assessment of the various measuring devices and samplers is a difficult job, he explained. Wind, rain and meteorological conditions may give rise to conclusions which may prove to be less accurate than had been desired. Questioned as to costs of future programs, Mr. Van Allen declined to give any fixed sum.

Even a small breakdown can cause a large pollution problem in a mill as large as Alpu, it appears.

"Just one emission creates a problem," Mr. Van Allen agreed. Some breakdowns are solved by lightening loads, or transferring to production of other papers.

Use of hog fuel has been greatly decreased, as the rising mountains of the stuff show on the grounds of the plant. But hog fuel is still an excellent fuel when it can be used in plants with sufficient capacity and better meteorological conditions, officials stated.

Some hog fuel is being used, off and on, for limited loads, but peak loads are being handled by the oil-fired burners, it was stated.

Despite M and B's million-dollar expenditure and explanations, the labor council's letter has gone out to the cabinet committee reminding it that when the letter from the labor council presented last spring, the council has been assured of expert help to investigate pollution problems.

"We still have a serious fall-out problem here. We request immediate investigation of the problem and its effects on the property and health of the residents of the Alberni Valley," the letter from the labor council urged.

MP Gives Guidelines On Montreal Meet

Torn between optimism and realism, Comox-Alberni MP Tom Barnett has offered what he feels should be the guidelines resulting from last week's nationwide Pollution And Our Environment conference in Montreal.

Admitting his views on pollution were broadened by the conference, Mr. Barnett says they are also colored by what he knows is going on in his constituency.

"I know that the air and water at Port Alberni and Port Alice are impregnated with industrial filth," Mr. Barnett said in his weekly newsletter. "I am aware of the concern of the people of Campbell River about the purity of their domestic water supply. The threat from mining wastes to the salmon runs using such rivers as the Tsolum and the Marble is very much in the forefront of my mind.

"The battle to preserve from contamination the oyster beds along the eastern shores of Vancouver Island has been forcibly brought to my attention by those concerned."

Whatever the official guidelines that come from the conference, these are Mr. Barnett's personal guidelines for the meeting:

● There should be evolved a national pollution standards code somewhat along the lines of the national building code. This could be enforced whenever and wherever it was applicable by the appropriate governmental authorities, be it federal, provincial, regional or municipal.

It should cover the fields of air, water and soil pollution. It should be subject to constant updating as scientific and technological know-how improves. Obviously, such a code will have to be developed under the federal government.

● There should be established a national pollution control institute. This, I believe, could best be done within the framework of the National Research Council, as is the case with the building research institute.

Its work could thus be available immediately for incorporation into the pollution standards code. I do not imply that all or even the major part of research work into pollution control should necessarily be done by the institute itself, but it could function, as the national research council already does in many other fields, as the coordinating body for research being undertaken by universities, by industrial corporations, and by such organizations as the B.C. Research Council.

The research council is already engaged in developing a computerized catalogue of scientific knowledge which could be developed to include pollution know-how, not only from across Canada, but from around the world.

● The provincial authorities in all the provinces should move swiftly and vigorously into exercising their constitutional enforcement jurisdiction over the fields of air, water and soil pollution, with adequate staff, not only to enforce, but also, and perhaps more important, to advise in the fields of preventing and eliminating pollution.

● A hard new look must be taken at existing municipal and other jurisdictional boundaries within the provinces to wipe out existing roadblocks to action in pollution control. This may mean, for example, in some instances, creation of new river basin authorities.

In other instances it will mean the creation of inter-provincial authorities in the creation of which the federal government may have to take the initiative and play some part.

● Lastly, in what I do not pretend is by any means an exhaustive list, an aroused citizenry must accept the responsibility of educating itself, its local industry and commerce and its elected leaders to the need for immediate and continuous action.

It should demand the widespread dissemination of information from official sources and, in this connection, the council of resources ministers should be asked and expected to play an important role.

Mr. Barnett concluded with a personal plea to his constituents, and, indeed, to all Canadians saying:

"In the last analysis, if pollution problems are to be solved, the citizens of the country must be their own police force.

"The man who throws an empty beer can into a lake or stream is just as much a polluter as the builder of a pulp mill, even though the pollution he creates may not be on the same scale."

Chief Just Waits

Laing Coming

By KLAUS MUEHNER

DUNCAN — The Minister of Indian Affairs Arthur Laing will come to Duncan next week to study sub-standard housing conditions on the Cowichan Indian Reserve.

Several weeks ago Ottawa was made aware of appalling conditions on the reserve here. Cowichan Indians claimed they did not receive the full benefit from housing funds by the federal government and a brief was sent to Ottawa by a specially-formed grievance committee.

Abraham Joe, chairman of this committee, said he received word from Mr. Laing Wednesday that he'll be here next Thursday.

The minister's special assistant Leonard Marchand, a full-blooded B.C. Interior Indian, will make arrangements for the minister's visit.

A discussion between Mr. Laing, Mr. Joe and Cowichan

Indian Chief Dennis Alphonse is planned. The band council will take Mr. Laing on a tour of the reserve.

Mr. Joe said Wednesday afternoon, "My great-grandfather, my grandfather and my father have been fooled for many years by the department of Indian Affairs but I am not going to be fooled."

"Until we hear it from Mr. Laing's mouth that he is going to help us with our housing problems, the protest march to the regional Indian affairs branch office at Vancouver is still on."

The march is scheduled for Dec. 5.

Earlier Mr. Joe received a letter from Mr. Laing in which the minister stated he is prepared to recommend a capital contribution to the band to meet the immediate housing needs and a sufficient amount of money would be spread over the next four years.

Mr. Laing added the Indian band council or an authorized band housing committee would administer the fund.

Mr. Joe said, "I must hear all that from the horse's mouth. 'This time the Indians will not be fooled.'"

He said the protest march proposed by members of the Cowichan band already has support from the 7,000-member Vancouver Island Tribal Federation.

In addition, 200 students from the University of Victoria and 150 students from UBC promised they would take part in the protest demonstration.

Mr. Joe said, "Letters from the B.C. Mainland chiefs are coming in all the time. 'They also will meet at Vancouver if we should have to carry out our march.'"

In Port Alberni

Tight Money Hurts

PORT ALBERNI — Tight money is the only thing holding back much-needed residential building in Port Alberni, building inspector Bill Seward told city council members as he presented his October news report.

A shortage of building lots in Port Alberni is giving Alberni a boost in residential construction at present, Mr. Seward said. But once mortgage money becomes more available, there should be another big boom in residential building, the inspector said.

"Look at the high-rise," Mr. Seward said. "It is being filled up as rapidly as the floors are opened. 'Motels are filled up with non-transients.'"

Mr. Seward even found, during a brief survey of accommodation, that one family was split up between two motels, neither having sufficient accommodation for the family at the present time. "I wish council could open up some mortgage money," Mr. Seward said.

The inspector suggested Prince George has been able to accomplish this through emergency housing legislation, although he admitted that the process is a lengthy one and despite considerable interest shown by council, no speedy solution can be offered.

In other instances it will mean the creation of inter-provincial authorities in the creation of which the federal government may have to take the initiative and play some part.

● Lastly, in what I do not pretend is by any means an exhaustive list, an aroused citizenry must accept the responsibility of educating itself, its local industry and commerce and its elected leaders to the need for immediate and continuous action.

It should demand the widespread dissemination of information from official sources and, in this connection, the council of resources ministers should be asked and expected to play an important role.

Mr. Barnett concluded with a personal plea to his constituents, and, indeed, to all Canadians saying:

Board Meets Emergency

No, these are not army barracks being moved into Woodlands junior high in Nanaimo. They're six portable classrooms transported to provide extra teaching space. Emergency move had to be made as carpenter strike and lockout earlier this year held up too much work. School board decided on emergency move.—(Agnes Flett)

Pickers Of Pegs Pinged

PORT ALBERNI — Police will be surveying the surveyors' pegs in the new Port Alberni subdivision at the east side of town.

The officers will be keeping an eye on the pegs after a request from city council, who finds that people are removing the pegs which are the only visible sign of a lot of costly survey work.

Signs will be posted warning against removal of the pegs, and police patrol of the area has been promised to keep the pickers from picking a peg more pegs.

Labor Protests Automatic Seat

PORT ALBERNI — The Alberni and District Labor Council has protested to Education Minister Leslie Peterson the right of MacMillan Bloedel to have an appointed trustee on the board of School District No. 70.

Explaining the labor council stand, Maurice Corbell, secretary, said, "This stems back to when the Alberni were a small community and MacMillan Bloedel operated a school in every logging camp. Now the school board serves some 27,000 people."

The letter stated in part: "It is therefore our opinion that Alberni Valley is no longer a company town. If MacMillan Bloedel wants representation on the school board, then the candidate should have to run in the civic election in the same manner as all other trustees are elected."

Mr. Corbell said the big logging firm no longer has schools in any of its camps except at Franklin River, which has a large number of permanent homes.

Two Councillors Seek Re-election

NORTH COWICHAN — Coun. Gerry Smith will seek re-election to North Cowichan council in the Dec. 10 election, it was disclosed here Wednesday night. He's been a councillor for eight years.

Coun. Dennis Hogan also announced Wednesday he'll seek re-election. He's been a councillor for three years.

Dr. F. Ellis Kelsey Dies at Age of 54

Dr. F. Ellis Kelsey, special assistant to the surgeon-general of the U.S. public health service, died Wednesday in Washington, D.C., of a heart attack at the age of 54. He was the husband of Dr. Frances O. Kelsey of Cobble Hill, who won the U.S. Distinguished Service Medal for keeping the infant-deforming drug thalidomide off the market.

Dr. Kelsey and his wife came to Vancouver Island each summer until the death of her father, Col. Frank Trevor Oldham, in 1961. Dr. Frances Kelsey met her husband when she was a lecturer with the University of South Dakota's school of medicine.

The late Dr. Kelsey was an advocate of the creation of drug-information clearing houses to provide scientists and physicians with immediate medical information and help them control use of potentially dangerous drugs.

From 1940 to 1951 he was on the faculty of the department of pharmacology at the University of Chicago, and later became chairman of physiology and pharmacology at the University of South Dakota school of medicine.

In 1960, Dr. Kelsey joined the division of general medical sciences of the U.S. National Institutes of Health as a program analyst and then as the executive secretary of the special training grants program.

Surviving in addition to his wife are two daughters, Susan, 19, at McGill University, and Christine, 17, a student at the National Cathedral School for Girls, Washington.

No Extension Planned For Drinking Hours

Col. Donald McGuigan, chairman of the British Columbia Liquor Control Board, said there will be no extension of legal drinking hours this year because Christmas and New Year's fall on a Saturday.

Ratepayers Asked $3,000,000

PORT ALBERT — A school referendum totalling more than $3,000,000 will go to ratepayers here Dec. 18, school trustee John Andrews has disclosed here.

Mr. Andrews said the department of education approval was expected this week and of the total amount asked for, $2,614,250 would be used for construction and acquisition of school sites and would be shared 50-50 by the provincial government and the school district.

Also shareable would be $328,550 for kindergarten services, Mr. Andrews said.

Ratepayers would foot the entire cost of a $218,500 gymnasium for the new E. J. Dunn secondary school.

The referendum also will provide $78,800 for school libraries, to be financed on a non-shareable basis, said Mr. Andrews.

Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes unveils Kipling plaque

Plaque Honors Poet

If you're looking for someone to recite Rudyard Kipling's poetry with feeling, Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes is your man.

Mr. Pearkes unveiled a plaque Tuesday afternoon honoring the English author-poet, which has been placed at the entrance to the apartment on Beach Drive which bears his name.

Later, standing by the marquee desk in the lobby of the building, the same desk where Kipling is said to have worked when he visited Victoria, Mr. Pearkes reminisced about the great man.

He told of Kipling's birth in Bombay, Dec. 30, 1865. He told of his days at United Services College in the North Devon town of Westward Ho where he experienced the adventures which later found their way into the stories in Stalky and Co.

He told of Kipling's private war against the sheltered life of the England of his time and his urging the assumption of the white man's burden. And he recited some of his poetry and very well, too.

Kipling visited Victoria in 1907, the year he was awarded the Nobel prize for literature.

Capt. D. H. McKay, president of the Kipling Society in Victoria, read a message from the society in London, England. He presented Mr. Pearkes with a volume of Kipling.

Mrs. A. E. G. Cornwell, secretary of the society, gave a poem purported to be written by him, is framed and Mrs. Pearkes a bouquet of roses.

Cobble Hill

Regional Plan Favored

COBBLE HILL — Ratepayers from South Cowichan have voted to set up a steering committee for the study of limited regional planning.

The ratepayers voted 31-13 for the move.

The benefits of a regional district were stressed by Robert Strachan, Cowichan-Malahat M.L.A.

He said it was better to have an interested local group making the decisions, "rather than someone in Victoria."

British Columbia's Opposition Leader said he was thinking in terms of a district embracing the area from the Malahat to Ladysmith.

"There should be an over-all body to develop the district in an orderly manner," he offered. "It would do away with ribbon development."

In answer to a question, he said pollution control must be a government responsibility.

He cited the new township of Gold River as an example of why pollution should be a government business.

Mr. Strachan pointed out most or all of the members of Gold River council are employees of the Talshe company.

They could be placed in a difficult situation if the need came to demand a costly installation for pollution control at the Talshe plant.

The South Cowichan Taxpayers' Association re-elected the following as the 1967 slate of officers: Pat Mason, president; John B. Baine, vice-president; Mrs. Veronica Lloyd, secretary; Mrs. Ed Whitaker, treasurer; John Baine, George White, Mrs. B. Little and Peter Owen, executive committee.

Committee Favors Deferment

PORT ALBERT — Committee reports have recommended that paving of the new subdivision be deferred to a date not later than April 30, 1967, and that the W. Felix Construction Company be released from its contract, provided it can produce a letter for R and E Crushing and Contracting, confirming that there will be no change in the paving costs.

Trenching for power and light at street crossings has been authorized and B.C. Hydro has been authorized to proceed with distribution lines.

Street lighting equipment and manhole covers for the new subdivision are also to be purchased. Lighting equipment from Canadian General Electric is recommended at a cost of $5,528.50 and manhole covers from Ocean Cement at $1,888.77.

The amalgamation committee has also reported it has requested a consulting engineering firm to provide revised figures on an inter-municipal crossing at 10th Avenue to link the two cities.

At present the only direct link between the two cities is the Gertrude Street - Stamp Avenue route, linking the two business areas.

The amalgamation committee also recommended that two individual libraries be maintained for the time being, one in Albert and one in Port Alberni. The recommendation came from a request by the library board.

John D thumbs through wires of support

John D Phased Out

By RON COLLISTER, Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Conservative meeting Wednesday dumped John Diefenbaker and gave him another one-year term to hide the fatal wound.

Today, the Tory leader still refuses to be dumped, but the course is set to early retirement.

With the likelihood of a leadership convention before the end of next year, his traditional caucus support is sure to break up as some of its key members start their own campaigns for the top job.

Already, his ordeal at the hands of the meeting has affected his ability to function in the Commons, where his stature has been undermined by the actions of the delegates.

Wednesday, for the first time in 26 years, he called at his Parliament Hill office but couldn't face parliament.

The Conservative leader will consider his future over the weekend. He is unlikely to retire immediately, but will indicate his plans soon.

If he agrees to the wishes of the delegates and stays as leader until a leadership convention probably next fall, he will be in a powerful position to influence the choice of a successor.

Worst Beatings Over

This fact alone guarantees that his worst beatings are over, that he will be able to rebuild his image as leader and step down next year with what Dalton Camp has promised him: "A blaze of glory."

Wednesday night, Mr. Camp said he hoped to talk to Mr. Diefenbaker — "but don't ask me when."

He did not intend to do anything more about a leadership convention "at the present time."

But the meeting had been definite in its instructions for a leadership convention and he would discuss it with the executive and other people.

John Diefenbaker was on a losing streak from the moment the leadership showdown began.

First, the delegates voted overwhelmingly for a secret ballot on all leadership votes.

Then came three leadership votes:

● Two virtually identical motions calling for leadership convention plus an expression of support for Mr. Diefenbaker were approved by 548 to 209, and 563 to 186.

● The count on a third vote, on confidence in Mr. Diefenbaker, was not revealed. E. A. Goodman, Q.C., of Toronto, chairman of the resolutions committee, said he had burned the ballot papers before they were counted.

While Mr. Diefenbaker was given a vote of support, it was a hollow success.

The word "confidence," traditional in resolutions of support for the leader, was missing, and the word "support" was used.

It will never be known how

'Hitler Youth' Feels Maritime Muscle

OTTAWA (Special) — How high did feelings run, how hot blood boil?

Among the Maritimers, with violence.

"There goes the old S.O.B.," said a student Conservative who later identified himself as a Camp follower, or as the Diefenbaker loyalists call them "Hitler Youth."

The "old S.O.B." was Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker as he left the Chateau and his inner guard of two cheering and still wildly loyal followers after crying: "Fight on, my men."

And the student who had called him that was flat on the floor the next moment.

Nursing a skinned knuckle where it had connected with the student's chin was Robert Muir, Conservative MP for Cape Breton North and Victoria.

"Sure I slugged the young punk," he said. "He can't call The Chief that."

Another whose muscle impressed another of Dalton Camp's "Hitler Youth" was Donald MacInnis, Conservative MP for Cape Breton South. He had gone to the voting desk to get his ballot and he was wearing an Arthur Maloney button.

"Who're you?" asked the student. "Show me your credentials."

"I'll show you," shouted MacInnis, the fighting ex-coal miner from Cape Breton. "Here, look," and he waved a fistful of scarred knuckles under the student's startled nose.

He got the ballot without further argument.

SAM SHEPPARD

GOES FREE

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—Samuel H. Sheppard was found innocent Wednesday night of killing his pregnant wife, Marilyn, in her bedroom 12 years ago.

The jury of seven men and five women took nearly 12 hours to acquit the 42-year-old farmer on a charge of second-degree murder in the trial he won last June from the U.S. Supreme Court.

Sheppard served nine years in prison after another jury — in a courtroom just four steps across the hall from where the trial was held — convicted him of second-degree murder Dec. 21, 1954.

The defendant did not take the stand in his retrial where 31 witnesses testified, compared with 70 at the nine-week first trial when the jury deliberated five days. At the first trial the charge was first degree murder, and the state asked the death penalty.

The retrial jury got the case from Common Pleas Judge Francis J. Talty at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday and returned its verdict at 10:15 p.m.

Reporters gathered around Sheppard and asked him to make a statement. He pointed to defence counsel F. Lee Bailey and said: "That's my man."

"Tell them anything you want, Sam," said Bailey.

Marilyn Sheppard died with more than 25 bone-deep blows to the head on a Sunday morning in the upstairs bedroom of her suburban Bay Village home.

The state said Sheppard killed Marilyn during a quarrel over his attentions to Susan Hayes, then a young, attractive medical technician at Bay View hospital.

Sheppard, who since has lost his medical licence, served there as a neurosurgeon.

Sheppard has contended that the crime was committed by an intruder who knocked him unconscious after beating Marilyn to death.

Commissioners Picked

All-Angles Probe To Comb Security

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson Wednesday tabled an order-in-council establishing a three-man royal commission to look into all aspects of security methods and procedures in Canada.

The commission, to be headed by Victoria-born Maxwell Weir Mackenzie, former deputy minister of trade and commerce, was promised by Prime Minister Pearson in March during discussion of the George Victor Spencer security case.

He said then that the aim would be to find out how well

present measures are protecting the state from subversion and also whether they are protecting the rights of individuals.

The other members are M. J. Coldwell, former leader of the CCF party, and Yves Pratte, Quebec city lawyer.

The commission is to advise the government "what security methods and procedures are most effective and how they can best be implemented."

Hearings of the body will be secret.

The order-in-council said the commissioners, in making their study and report, must take all necessary steps to preserve:

● The secrecy of sources of security information in Canada.

● The privacy of individuals involved in specific cases which may be examined.

● The security of information provided to Canada in confidence by other nations.

Mr. Mackenzie, 59, is chairman of the board of Canadian Chemical Company in Montreal. He served as deputy minister of trade and commerce from 1945 to 1951 and was first deputy minister of the department of defence production for a year before returning to private industry.

Mr. Mackenzie also is president of Chemcell Ltd., a subsidiary, and a director of a number of Canadian companies.

He began his public service in 1939 with the foreign Exchange Control board and later served with the wartime prices and trade board.

The Scarborough lifeboat immediately put to sea.

The rig has a crew of about 30.

The oil rig has fixed legs dug deep in the sea bed below 110 feet of water. It was owned jointly by the Shell and Esso petroleum companies, but was taken over by Toel Ltd., a French firm, about three months ago.

Elsewhere, strong gales over southern England caused widespread damage to buildings, uprooted trees and sea and air traffic for the second consecutive day and brought danger of flooding.

Then, urgently: "Request lifeboat assistance. May have to evacuate."

Storm Rakes Britain

Oil Rig Sends SOS

LONDON (CP) — An urgent call for help flashed ashore Wednesday night from the North Sea oil rig Neptune One, 3 1/2 miles off Ravenscar, Yorkshire, as gales with some winds gusting to 110 miles an hour continued lashing Britain and nearby waters.

Its first signal to the Scarborough coast guard station said: "We are taking a terrific pounding."

Then, urgently: "Request lifeboat assistance. May have to evacuate."

Residents in large areas on the Thames River estuary were warned to watch for tides up to three feet above normal.

Some ferry service across the English Channel and sailings between Liverpool and Ireland were cancelled.

Dozens of other ships were forced to run for shelter as the winds mounted in fury.

The Orkney Islands were cut off both by sea and air.

In The Netherlands, the gales forced suspension of all pilot services and alerted dike guards along the country's southern coast.

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "The party caucus, not the party organization determines the party leadership in Parliament."

This was John Diefenbaker, answering the question as to why he was put to him: "Do you intend remaining as leader of the official opposition no matter what?"

Then he went on to recall how Sir Winston Churchill had served nearly three years as prime minister before the Conservative party organization confirmed him as party leader.

The party caucus is supreme, he insisted, "and that is that."

He was saying these things in an interview with initially three and then five newspapermen, four hours after he had marched into the lobby of the Chateau Laurier and told 300 wildly cheering supporters: "Fight on, my men."

But where at the Chateau, he had quoted the Elizabethan warrior knight, Sir John Barton, he was now reading from the Bible.

And instead of the lines from the Middle Ages: "I am wounded but I am not slain — I lay me down to rest awhile and then I'll fight again." It was the 27th Psalm.

A telegram had come in, one of several hundred, with the message: "See Psalm 27."

So he reached into the book-shelf near his Centre Block office desk, and read: "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?"

"The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

B.C. Boss Fed Up

By JACK FRY
Legislative Reporter

B.C. Progressive Conservative president Stuart Fleming said Wednesday he will not stand for re-election because of his inability to reconcile differences of opinion within the party in B.C.

In addition to giving up the presidency, he said that "under no circumstances" will he consider contesting the provincial leadership.

He said in an interview from his office in Vernon that he notified other Tory officers "some while ago" of his intention not to run for another term.

REPORT DENIED

Mr. Fleming denied earlier reports that he is quitting because Esquimalt-Saanich MP George Chatterton charged that 60 B.C. delegates to the Tory convention in Ottawa were illegally appointed.

"Part of my reason is this—I
